Nope.

You've quoted out of context and tried to make this something it isn't.

That revalidates your status as "liar".

Why?

YOU didn't mention it...Why should he have?

That period of time ALOS falls into YOUR "I had an on-going interest" rants. Pointing out that there was the creation of a class of license that would even allow a non-hacker such as yourself to get a license for access to 97%+ of all Amateur priviledges in that interim only serves to show that despite getting EASIER to get on the air, you

Uh huh.

Still lot's of people managed to pass the Novice tests then.

Even more managed to pass the Exams for the other classes.

You were not one of them.

Hmmmmmmmmm......

In 1972 I was a Sophomore in High School, working two part time jobs (without the benefit of yet having a driver's license), hitch-hiked out to the airport to start my flying lessons, and was active in the Civil Air Patrol Cadet program.

Oh yeah...I also got my Novice license, WN8OAH, in the middle of all of that.

I would voluntarily enlist in the US Marine Corps in 1974.

So far, we've not been treated to anything of a "historical"
nature by Jim Miccolis that WASN'T true.

So it seems the "moral and ethical felonies" alluded to by Lennie were Lennie's.

> >> (rest of Len's errors snipped for sake of time and space).

I doubt Jim's "error's" need any more room than the tip of one,
maybe two fingers.

However considering the number of times YOUR hide has been left exposed in this forum, I'd say it's a pretty good thing that YOU have the "vast expanses" to archive upon, Lennie....

Just a lesson for you, Markie...

Since you like to make up "definitions" as you go...there's one of my own.

See how doing so confuses the reader and the conversation...?!?!

Now...back to the ususal rants.....

UNQUOTE

You always try to "remind" everyone I claimed you have AIDS, but just like the current series of out-of-context misquotes you've been persuing, you never cite the claim IN CONTEXT.

Just thought I'd remind you.

Also serves to remind you that when people are talking in a certain group on a certain subject, all parties need to have the same set of accepted terms for any meaning.

Your continued practice of "making up" definitions and meanings as you go only serves to prove what an idiot you are.

As if we needed more evidence.

Of course you're not. Why would you want to be able to communicate effectively in real time with others who don't share your language...!??!

Of course you already have the problem of not being able to effectively communicate with those who DO share your language....

You spent squat. You never tried...or at least never tried more than once...Once it was apparent that this was something that you'd really have to apply yourself to get, you QUIT.

if you had left out the word "my" you woluld have a point but you did not the only inferences are that you have been sodmized or that you enage

in the fetish or shiting on mmens gentials or that YOU fucked the use of English and lack the moral courage to admit it

you might want to try backing down before someone passes the original
note to your wife

I hear that that IS in the works

He had no right to involve you in his sickness...

Robesin trips himself up every other day revealing some new facet of his life. But I really do wish he would have kept it secret. I try not to be judgemental as well, but I'd really rather not know the intimate details of two (or more) consenting (hopefully) adults (hopefully).

No, I came due to kOOks of your ilk congregating in the RRCB, so I figure I would continue to groom you as the kOOk that you are. I see many nominations for you in the future .

And backup these supposed "years" that I have trolled for Mark. Also backup the claim that I have posted to RRAP for years. All of my posts are archived indee dwith the CAP cadets I also wonder about the adult part of that, esp with his instance that Bis like me don't exist indeed It become a logical inference now (with logic he uses to insit my wife is male not female) to bwonder if the other man involved isn't amy after all he inist bis don't exist and by this statement then he woulda homosexaul

Robesin posts this complete filth in an attempt to smear you, trips up and reveals some apparently personal account wherin he was involved in a homosexual love triangle, then complains that you aren't "acting human."

Always the victim...

Of course, it could have all been a lie, none of it true. Hopefully the CAP has a "don't ask, don't tell" policy, but it looks as if Robesin told. But if lied, he's probably OK with the CAP. This just might be the time for Robesin to confess that he's a habitual liar.

I just shake my head

I am certainly human enough to be enjoying his plight. honest enough toadmit to it. I am a good enough person to admit that enjoying it, is not the nicest thing on to be but then in temple most weeks we recite a Palsm that goes "I will see

Maybe I spoke too soon. Should have let Tom Eddy go on for a few more days and reveal more of his Robesinisms.

"uncalled for..."

"childishly tawdry..."

"speaks volumes..."

"Lennie..."

The "childishly tawdry" part sounds like he just put down a harlequin romance starring Fabio. I can't wait for him to tell us that he's "livid." ;^)

indeed I suspect Robeson is finding life as Robeson on RRAp to rough for him so he is preparing to go the Wismen route and god only what a torrent of filth we will be treated too

I gues to make "human" in his eyes I would have to NOT point out is errors (or comet on his efforts to INVLE ME in his love life)

well Ladies and gents if Robeson is Good example of Human I don't want to be a human

If he is to be considered a good ham I don't want to be one of those either

but he is neither

"Frenchmen". I broke no regs in my 6m operation from anywhere. As you've been previously advised, if you have a problem with French ops being outside their allocated band segment on any band, you should take it up with the French authorities and the REF. Additionally, my 6m operation would not likely effect my eligibility to run for an ARRL elected position. My views are mainstream and I have no record of bad mouthing the ARRL or its Board of Directors.

Was code the ONLY way to learn the written portion? Besides, using a bunch of beeps to spell out characters over the airwaves takes no technical ability at all. Here in Canada, a no-code license requires MORE technical skill than a code license. In other words, here in Canada you need to learn MORE to pass a no-code license since learning code is a motor skill, not a technical one.

>You people don't want knowledgable hams anymore.

Learning code does not impart any type of "knowledge" any more than learning roller skating.

>CB'ers dont have to >learn CW, are they better?

Based on the CBers I used to hear on the higher sideband channels, I heard very little of the insults I have seen here spewed by some of the pro-coders. Therefore, I'd say that they were at least better behaved than the aforementioned pro-coders.

Yes, there were assholes on CB, but CB didn't make them that way. By the same token, learning code will not turn an asshole into a nice guy. CB is just a ham radio in the embryo stage, a zygote. The only real difference between CB and ham is the choices of bands and the power of the transmitter, when you really look at things in the most basic sense.

The 'problem', Morkie, is in you trying to take one sentence out of a paragraph and make that the whole issue.

You look stupid doing it, but then that's something else you've never had a problem doing...Humiliating yourself in public.

> the only inferences are that you have been sodmized or that you enage
> in the fetish or ####ing on mmens gentials or that YOU ####ed the use

Morkie, you continue to try and use one sentence out of a greater paragraph.

It doesn't work.

> you might want to try backing down before someone passes the original
> note to your wife

I have "the original note" here, wherein I specifically state that I conceed that you will always know two things that I will never know.

What it's like to lick my excrement off of an other man's genitals and the going rates for welfare recipients in Michigan.

Now you can go ahead and misquote THAT too, but it will still be as stupid looking as the one you've been doing all this week.

> I hear that that IS in the works

Be my guest.

I didn't say anything about commiting a lewd act, Morkie.

Quite the contrary...I said I'd never know.

AIDS: (as it applies to Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ

Arrogant Ignorant
Depreciating
Selfish

Just a lesson for you, Markie...

Since you like to make up "definitions" as you go...there's one of my own.

See how doing so confuses the reader and the conversation...?!?!

Now...back to the ususal rants.....

UNQUOTE

You always try to "remind" everyone I claimed you have AIDS, but just like the current series of out-of-context misquotes you've been persuing, you never cite the claim IN CONTEXT.

Just thought I'd remind you.

Also serves to remind you that when people are talking in a certain group on a certain subject, all parties need to have the same set of accepted terms for any meaning.

Your continued practice of "making up" definitions and meanings as you go only serves to prove what an idiot you are.

As if we needed more evidence.

No lies. As long as you continue to have anal sex with other men, your probability of contracting Hepatits is exponentially greater. The number 1 vector for Hepatits transmission is the Oral/Fecal route.

Read it for yourself, fatboy...

And while I may contract some form of Hepatitis as a consequence of my employment (it won't be "B" since I am innoculated), I won't get it in the manner I said that I conceed to you as having a knowledge of that I never will.

"STARTS", Jim...?!?!

You posted ONE TIME and he was right back into "Jimmie" and other such diminutives.

Lennie's always found it necessary to put anyone who he perceives as even marginally "aware" of subjects he deems himself as master of
"in their place".

You get the Lion's Share of abuse from him because you scare the bee-jeebers out of him...How could a "mere amateur" get the best of a "paid professional"...?!?!

You do it so effortlessly!

I admit I've given up on RRAP as a "discussion forum" years ago.
Lennie was not about to "discuss" anything without the Nazi analogies, profanities and outright insults.

It's now not much more than a mindless passtime to relieve stress and laugh at Morkie, Brain and Toiddie. They DO make it so easy to do.

I've had some very, VERY interesting conversations based upon direct e-mail exchanges I've had from folks which were themselves based upon having had several "letters to the editor" published in CQ in the last 6 months...Not to mention that my comments to the FCC were excerpted in November 2005.

Lennie, Morkie, Brain and Toiddie have been notably absent.

You'd think with 17 "comments" on the last NPRM that at least ONE of Lennie's comments would have mde it to "CQ".

> You should work on your Morse Code skills, Len.

Why?

He can't get past the written. Grade schoolers can...but not

It will be fun to watch Morkie tap dancing as fast as he can to re-task subject lines to misquotes and profanities.

Let's see how many days in a row we all can keep him tied up..See if "Mr(s) Morkie" get's PO'ed when he spends all his "productive time" with his alleged home-based computer business chasing RRAP posts rather than making an income and feeding "her".

I know...I know...You're saying "but he doesn't have a home business and only spends time on the computer wating for the next welfare check to clear the bank".....I know that...But it will be fun to watch.

Watch for the following "tricks":

Frequent re-pasting of the same rhetoric from one thread to another to keep ahead of the posts.

Use of over 30 "nics" to get around Google post limits. Many invoking dead people.

Adding in of crossposts to non-germane NG's.

Quoting out of context.

Use of profanity...Usually when it's obvious he's tired or getting into the second 6-pack of PBR or Olympia Gold.

Threadjacking.

Forwards of NG posts to disinterested 3rd parties to try and intimidate people into not posting.

Feel free to add to this list of MorkieTricks.

Dave Heil wrote:

They go all the way back to the very beginning of the League. They're really very basic conflict-of-interest rules. Someone whose employment is tied to parts of the radio industry that conflict with amateur radio, or could conflict with amateur radio, are not allowed to hold policy-making ARRL positions, such as Director and Vice-Director.

For example, someone working on a BPL system could not be a vice director.

It's not about whether someone is a "professional" or not, but whether the person's "pecuniary interest" could present a conflict.

The problem is in the interpretation of those rules. The committee which decides such things decided there could be a conflict-of-interest. The BoD agreed with the committee.

Some of us here in the Atlantic Division (where he lives), and elsewhere, thought that Carl should be allowed to run. We did not see the alleged conflict-of-interest. We expressed that opinion to the commitee, the board, the officers, etc. but they did not change their minds.

btw, director and vice director are division positions, not section positions.

> The matter is moot since Carl's mouth would > have precluded his being elected had he qualified for candidacy.

Possibly. But as an ARRL member in the Atlantic Division, I thought he should have the chance to run. The fact that I disagree with him on some issues might have been overshadowed by broad agreement on other issues.

Maybe I would have voted for him, maybe not. Maybe he could have won, maybe not, but at least I wanted the choice.

Carl's excellent work on interference-from-BPL speaks for itself.

Director terms are not for life. The board, committees and officers change over time. There will be other elections.

He should have cited http://www.familywatchdog.us instead, because that's where you can do a nationwide search. For example, I found a Baltimore Wiseman that way, as well as some Utah and Florida Morgans.

AMERICA IN DANGER of its own out-of-control Bio-Terror:
Is 1984 here? God help us, blinded!
Originally Secret Bio-Aerosols are misused to HARM and Torture in U.S.A.

Our government needs TORTURE in U.S.? See details below...
It has your VOTE, support? Abused...

CRITICS (political/social/cultural) are harassed and secretly persecuted
along with their KIDS in schools/colleges, especially, during tests/exams (Think: Guantanamo "stress-positions" in the context of 1984-technologies)

Bio-Aerosols and aerosolized chemicals are used to cause:
- severe colds/coughs turning into bronchitis, eye irritation
- bacterial pneumonia/other pneumonia, shortness of breath
- surges of severe headaches, migraines, dizziness, etc.
- fainting collapses by symptoms-mimicking aerosols
- severe stomach pains (sharp, burning, nausea, etc)
- chest-wall pains, heart-muscle inflammations/trauma, etc.
WORSE:
- heart attacks under cover of second-hand smocking
- car crashes/accidents by Vertigo-causing aerosols
- liver/organ failure by small-dose toxins (trace-less?)
- cancer-causing/facilitating - months-long assasinations
This "Yushchenko syndrom" CAN destabilize NATIONs Waste, Fraud, Cronism and Abuse in HomeSec/FBI

U.S. mail IS polluted in "anthrax-like" manner to HARM critics Libraries, airplanes, hotels, offices, buses, trains - all polluted!

A network of Secret Gas-Aerosol Rooms operated in US
(in Philadelphia, Narberth, Lower Merion, PA)
(in Wilmington and Newark, DE)
(in Hampton, Williamsburg and Richmond, VA)
AND ELSEWHERE.... details below...
Bio-aerosols used to hurt and simulate panic attacks, etc.!
Soviets locked critics into nut-houses, now WE do the same!
Symptoms-mimicking aerosols do HARM, weak or ill people.

Say "Stop, I care" - call Senate (202) 224-3121
House of Representatives (202) 225-3121

This was a new on-line ad placed in Philadelphia Inquirer and Philadelphia Daily News on www.philly.com (see full text below)
It was about the secret aerosols rooms in US. One could find it by searching "secret", say, in the ad section of philly.com.

Democracy can not function effectively without the informed public. As a former NASA Langley scientist working in the area of nanotechnology and nanoscale particles, I have been recently exposed to the establishment of secret gas-aerosol rooms inside of United States, at least in the Mid-Atlantic region (from Philadelphia to Virginia).
First, the highly irritant aerosols have surfaced at the NASA Langley Research Center in several safety accidents. Investigations were blocked, probably, because of lack of Congressional approval for such financially-lucrative research at NASA. Later, these aerosols had been encountered outside of NASA in Virginia, Delaware and Pennsylvania
This points out to yet another proliferation of originally-sensitive technologies into domestic American life to hurt and harass people without a proper oversight and much control. This amounts to torture, extra-judicial prosecution and authoritarian intimidation tactics. The use of such irritants and the operations of the secret gas-aerosol rooms are gross violations of human and constitutional rights of American citizens and various domestic and international laws.

----------Full text of an ad from Philadelphia's philly.com----------
TORTURE IN USA: Secret Aerosol Rooms
US Scientist needs legal help dealing with the secret aerosols rooms (SARs) operated illegally in Philadelphia area, Newark (DE), Hampton and Williamsburg (VA). Highly volatile aerosols with and without bacterial content cause dry cough, airways and eyes irritation, chest pain and inflammation. FBI and Homeland Security associates are likely operators of SARs, while collaborators may be hotel staff and landlords, who get financial/material or other incentives. US citizens and kids are victims.

Torture is any act by which severe pain, whether physical or psychological, is intentionally inflicted on a person as a means of intimidation, deterrence, revenge, punishment, sadism, or information gathering. At times, medicine and medical practitioners have been drawn into the ranks of torturers, either to judge what victims can endure, to apply treatments which will enhance torture, or as torturers in their own right. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Torture

America in Danger!

America in danger -
The vice is NOT impeached.
America in danger -
The public trust is breached.

Big Brother spins protection
And fear is used to clamp.
Democracy needs action!
On which side do you stand?

Which side are you on, boys?
Which side moves you on?
Which side are you on, girls?
Which side did you wrong?
(Chorus after F. Reece)

Your church is burned by haters.
The priests to go to jail?
Your dreams are cheyned by traitors,
But hope still shines through veil.

Dust rooms came back to gas us
With neo-Naz (or Con) embrace...
New immigrants do make US!
And not the SSuper-race...

The Government of Torture

Our government needs TORTURE?!
It has your VOTE, and, now, support?
But peace (not vice) needs steady nurture
And trustful words of calm rapport.

Beware of loud, but FALSE, ideas
That flame a thirsty hellish torch.
Protect the old and true ideals
And Constitution's civic urge.

Yes, torture IS a hellish torch -
In bloody hands, a blinded sword,
With Constitution used to forge
All laws on rights as mere absurd!

Remember victim's silent cry
And SEE the Christ in all of us.
Don't let your government to spy
And torture with some bio-dust.

There is NO good use for evil torture!
No matter how the need is spinned
By Nixon's men, as bloody sergeants,
While truth is painfully re-skinned.

What libelous accusations?

You're here, aren't you?

The unit you claimed to be a member of has yet to be proven as existing, ergo no apology is necessary, least of all to you.

> was part

No. YOU have piled one "war story" lie upon another, "Colonel".

You were never an officer.

You were never a veteran.

You are not a college graduate.

You are not a business owner.

You are not truthful at any level.

You are not now nor ever were a MENSA member.

You are not a "chemical corps" NCO

If anyone has any apologizing to do, it is you, for your spamming of multiple NG's, your dishonoring of Veterans by your presumption of claiming to be one, and your illicit behaviour with underage sex partners.

That may have meant something to you, Morkie, but it just came out as gibberish.

To "stop" one must have started.

Start putting a picture up that proves otherwise.

I didn't. An law enforcement offical said you were under investigation.

Stop accepting welfare and abusing your father's benefits.

What libelous accusations?

> apologize for calling my DAD a rapist

You're here, aren't you?

> apologize for lying about the non existance of the 47th my old unit

The unit you claimed to be a member of has yet to be proven as existing, ergo no apology is necessary, least of all to you.

No. YOU have piled one "war story" lie upon another, "Colonel".

You were never an officer.

You were never a veteran.

You are not a college graduate.

You are not a business owner.

You are not truthful at any level.

You are not now nor ever were a MENSA member.

You are not a "chemical corps" NCO

If anyone has any apologizing to do, it is you, for your spamming of multiple NG's, your dishonoring of Veterans by your presumption of claiming to be one, and your illicit behaviour with underage sex partners.

You're worried about Mark Morgan's yard and you think I'm sticking my nose where it doesn't belong? Aren't you the guy the CDC notifies about Mark's health status? You don't sound like someone who is all there.

> Go

Now you're worried about my yard, Rog? I don't have a broken down "farmouse" or even a "nearmouse" and there aren't any weeds in my yard.
The yard is freshly mowed and raked. Now take some of your medicine and go to bed. Try to stay away from the computer until after the full moon.

Have you set your neighbors straight on cleaning up their yards, UnWiseman? Have you contacted Marshall County about those who haven't complied with your edicts? Has the CDC advised you of their health status?

You're certifiably nuts.

Morkie, I will conceed that you know two things that I will never know...What it's like to lick my excrement off of another man's genitals, and the going welfare rates in Michigan.

Morkie, I will conceed that you know two things that I will never know...What it's like to lick my excrement off of another man's genitals, and the going welfare rates in Michigan.

Tsk. Heil NEEDS to work on his PEOPLE SKILLS.

I am a professional in the electronics industry (that includes radio) who is only retired from regular working hours. My advocacy is only for elimination of the manual radiotelegraphy test from US amateur radio regulations.

You need to take a look at what YOUR personal motives are in taking it so hard about those of us who seek removal of the code test. Several possibilities exist
there:

1. You are just a Code Bigot. Bigots always approve actions of similar bigotry in others.

2. You are a control freak determined to make all obey YOUR commands.

3. You cannot understand that manual morse code is a dead or dying mode in ALL radio services; there is NO need to keep the manual morse test to provide a "pool" of trained morsemen for the national interest.

4. You are scared that removal of the code test will end your bragging rights, of self-defined "importance" of rank-title-status-privilege
based largely on morsemanship.

5. You are an elitist snob who has the "deep insecurity" of NEEDING rank-status-title to make you appear "better" than others.

6. You are a supreme egotist, judging all on your accomplishments and denigrating those of others.

You fill at least one of those 6 things above, possibly several; irrelevant and a detail as to which but your actions DO show fitting at least one of them. You have to understand that there are a great number of other citizens who also wish the code test removal. You have to understand that such a position is NOT some idiotic moral imperfection but rather a reasonable opinion based on the advancement of technology of all radio by this first decade of the new millennium.

Agreed. But, please remember that Blow Code is a morse bigot.
He (or she) is representative of only a minority of United States radio amateurs. When the major accomplishment in life of such morse bigots has been morsemanship, they will naturally trumpet that singular skill and attempt to moralize it as some kind of positive attribute that one MUST have.

>Here in Canada, a no-code license requires >MORE technical skill than a code license. In other words, here in >Canada you need to learn MORE to pass a no-code license since learning
>code is a motor skill, not a technical one.

I applaud Industry Canada's decision on their regulations.
My contact with Canadian regulations has been minimal but their website on radio regulations explained it all. Blow Code is confused on the task of the United States FCC in regulating ALL US civil radio; our FCC is not a booster organization for amateur radio or any other radio service here. The FCC only "wants" radio service users to obey the regulations.

Manual radiotelegraphy skill testing for an amateur radio license has existed since the first US radio regulating agency and was maintained mostly out of inertia and the insistence of the ARRL (once it had risen above its competition) through lobbying the FCC. Given the vast scope of today's radio services, the FCC has a far greater task to keep up with its regulatory task. Amateur radio here is low on the regulatory task list of the FCC.

Manual telegraphy IS a motor skill (more correct "psychomotor" skill) but morse bigots become more psycho about their personal skills, equating it to intellectual knowledge and the ability to reason. Morse bigots see only their kind and want to destroy those who think differently; that is security for their "tribe."

>>You people don't want knowledgable hams anymore.
>Learning code does not impart any type of "knowledge" any more than

^^ [an example of the morse bigot and their confusion over psycho-motor skills versus intellectual knowledge]

The gratuitous insults to Citizens Band Radio Service users has been in existance since 1958 when the USA authorized its use here (as 'Class D' CB on only 23 27 MHz band channels). That's a time span of 48 years.

From its inception CB has NEVER required ANY testing to obtain a CB license. The "license" was pro-forma, a slight revision of the Restricted Class of Radio-telephone Operator license then common to services such as both private and civil aviation pilots.

Nearly a half century ago, US radio amateurs developed a distaste for the US government and these new radio service users for: (1) "Taking away" their 11 meter band (little used, sitting below the largest amateur radio allocation on HF); having the audacity in NOT requiring any testing plus intolerant bitching over NOT having to pass any morse code test. That almost-hatred developed into the bigotry seen today.

The bigotry grew when about a decade after authorization
the offshore electronics industries hit the US market with less-expensive CB transceivers and long-haul truckers took to that service. CB users here soon out-numbered radio amateurs by a large margin. With such a huge base of users, a common patois/lingo/jargon grew that was NOT related to amateur radio but had roots in our state highway patrol police organizations. That lingo became quite different than amateurs' use of theirs, so that reinforced the "different-destroy" attitude of the amateurs' bigotry against CB users. Amateurs like to make fun of CB lingo but don't realize their jargon is amusing to other HF radio service users and the military radio. Amateurs tend to think of themselves as first and foremost without realizing that they never were first nor foremost and were always a minority in radio.

>Yes, there were assholes on CB, but CB didn't make them that way. By >the same token, learning code will not turn an asshole into a nice >guy.

Morse bigots have the egotistical self-definition of THEIR skills being the only "true" ones for amateur radio. They will rationalize that self-righteous attitude with any number of archaic "reasons" that defy validity for regulatory purposes by radio regulating agencies. In last year's Notice of Proposed Rule Making (NPRM) on the elimination of morse code testing for US radio amateurs, several Commenters cited the ability to "thwart terrorism" by using morse code! :-) Apparently they had taken a Hollywood motion picture fictional depiction of aliens-from-outer-space-invasion as a documentary of a real event [film title was "Independence Day"]!

>CB is just a ham radio in the embryo stage, a zygote. The only >real difference between CB and ham is the choices of bands and the >power of the transmitter, when you really look at things in the most >basic sense.

I see it differently. Human beings like to communicate.
That is evident in the enormous growth of cellular telephony and daily use of that; the US Census Bureau stated two years ago the one in three Americans had a cell phone subscription. That is roughly 100 million users of those tiny full-duplex radio transceivers.
Several million CB users exist on USA highways (exact figures unknown as CB has been unlicensed for years, but can be approximated from EIA - Electronic Industry Association - statistics on manufactured and imported electronic equipment). FRS and GMRS unlicensed UHF HTs may exceed the million mark by now. In the maritime radio service private boat owners' VHF radios exceed that of commercial ship owners, VHF voice required on inland waterways and harbors for traffic control.

Private boat owners are increasing their HF radio use on deep-water travels unsing HF SSB voice (a few radios marketed for sales to both them and radio amateurs).

CB is 48 years old, hardly a youngster/child/teener.
It is DIFFERENT than amateur radio on HF, therefore abhored by some radio amateurs stuck in their radio bigotry attitudes put there long ago by their ancestors. If truck drivers have spread a DIFFERENT lingo on CB radio, then they did so out of THEIR need to communicate about THEIR things, not some self-righteous and not-required-by-regulation "traditional" lingo used by hams. Amateurs don't/can't speak to others on HF and are restricted (in the USA) to "non-essential" communications (paraphrased from US regulations). Truck drivers CAN and DO communicate with others on and off the highways freely and with much less of the bigotry displayed by some radio amateurs looking for someone to destroy.

Where does manual radiotelegraphy fit into this?
It doesn't.

And those posts didn't include anything by Wiseman or cross posts to rram (I had already killed those posts). Near as I can tell, the bulk of the spam was due to Obsessive-Compulsive Marky and Screaming Steve.

That scatological spew by the Hate Brothers is enough to make Woger Wiseman have serial orgasms when he returns to the group tomorrow morning.

After that kind of stimulation, he will stay here forever.

There are two ways to communicate when all you have is a transceiver, phone, & CW. All you need for phone is a microphone, All you need for CW is a pencil and paper. If you had to build a transmitter in an emergency, a CW transmitter is simpliest to build. We are after all technical aren't we? We're not just appliance operators.

Eliminating CW removes a way we can communicate. A simple way, where all that's required is an ear, a pencil, and paper, and a skill.

It's not Markies fault. The towns people thought his place was the local landfill and they have been dumping their trash on his property for three straight years now. Mark enjoys it because he doesn't have to go dumpster diving anymore and he can spend more time on the internet pissing people off.

I agree with you Watchman.

I wish the Dr Death and his friends would stop trolling RRAP. Now they got the k00ks trolling too. It's seems to get worse when 11 meters is dead and they need somewhere else to cause hate and discontent, so they show up in RRAP and tease Markie. They tease him because Markie is a CB'er gifted with a ham license, and since they're not smart enough to earn one they troll the group. Sad.

I think what will finally snuff out Omega One will be complaints from

Would the two of you PLEASE consider getting on 14.313 live some weekend morning or afternoon? The good ole boys freq. JUST AIN'T THE SAME since Dumbass Donnie signed off of ham radio for good some Months ago and the "Kind Jewish Indian" finally left the "GOMER Club" (see below) and finally made it to a comfy room in the Alzheimer's Ward of the local rest home.

I am VERY sure that the both of you and your RRAP/RRAM/RRSW entorage would be a welcome act on the 14.313 stage, where you can all join the ranks of past RF Clowns like FZ, MUJ PZT, OTK,OKA, NX-Tango and many other now enshrined in the FCC Hall of Fame.

WHY NOT CONSIDER IT BOYS?
YOU'D BE THE TOP LIVE COMEDY SHOW ON ALL OF HAM RADIO!

Terms you may want to remember:

GOMER - "Get Out of My Emergency Room!. An acronym used by the medical workers who frequent AT to refer to people (usually old) who are on the verge of an inevitable death and who cling to life by making entirely too much fruitless use of the services of the medical professions.

Fap - Onomatopoeia for masturbation. Most often used in the context of masturbating over someone else's misfortune.
Potential SRs (XYL's) can also be described as "fap-worthy".

Grogan - Turd.

Pinch a loaf - To use the anal sphincter to break an overly long Grogan in two as it emerges, thus causing the lower half to fall off into the bowl.

Peckerwood - An inversion of woodpecker, is also used but usually only with negative connotations. It was coined in the 19th century by Southern blacks to describe poor whites. They considered them loud and troublesome like the bird, often with red hair like the woodpecker's head plumes. This word is still widely used by Southern blacks to refer to Southern whites.

You gave up, Len. You said yourself that it was hard work, didn't you?

The point was that you tried and then gave up.

Your behavior here says otherwise, Len.

Even though you don't seem to want such a license.

Who said it was a moral defect, Len?

You simply gave up.

That doesn't change the fact that you gave up trying to learn Morse Code because it was too much work for you.

Is that how you think amateur radio should be? A few channels in one part of the spectrum, very low power, one or two modes, and only approved manufactured equipment?

In any event, it doesn't change the fact that you gave up trying to learn Morse Code because it was too much work for you.

But not on the amateur bands. And not using your own station unless you got a station license for it.

The fact is that legally operating an amateur radio station (except in a life-and-death emergency) on the amateur bands requires a valid amateur radio license. No other form of license or experience is acceptable to FCC.

You've also left out the fact of how much Morse Code is actually used on the HF amateur bands - then and now.

How much of HF amateur radio operation used Morse Code in the late 1950s, Len? How much of HF amateur radio operation uses Morse Code today, Len?

In other words, it was hard work because it took you a lot of time to learn it.

Who said you had to choose? Couldn't there be time for both?

I thought you didn't have any grudge against someone using Morse Code, Len.

None of that changes the fact that you gave up trying to learn Morse Code because it was too much work for you.

I'm sorry for your loss, Len. It's clear some things were delayed.

Nobody said it was necessary, Len. Read what was written, for a change.

The fact is that you gave up because it was too much work for you. If it were easy for you to learn, you would have learned it quickly and passed the 13 wpm test long before 1963.

1964 was 42 years ago, Len. From your accounts of your personal history, you never again tried to learn Morse Code, nor to get any class of amateur license. But you've had plenty of time to argue about it, and make fun of others who have done what you have not.

That's right, Len.

In amateur radio, you're not even a Novice yet.

Sure you do, Len. That's part of why you behave the way you do here.

And you tell us all about at every opportunity.

In any event, it doesn't change the fact that you gave up trying to learn Morse Code because it was too much work for you.

> Outside of the amateur radio pecking order, WHAT GOOD IS

What do you mean by "amateur radio pecking order"? And "morsemanship"?

The plain and simple fact is that Morse Code skill is needed to pass one of the license tests for an Amateur Radio license with HF/MF privileges in the USA.

Morse Code skills are very useful in operating an Amateur Radio station. Besides the fact that it is enjoyable once the skills are developed, it permits the use of a wide variety of equipment, gets the most results from limited resources, and is a different form of communication than or text modes.

> It isn't used for regular comms by > any other radio service. There isn't one single Public > Safety radio service that uses manual morse code.

So what?

The fact is that lots of Amateur Radio operators do use Morse Code. Amateur Radio is not part of those other radio services - it's a separate and distinct radio service. Only a person with a valid Amateur Radio license can legally operate an Amateur Radio station (except in a life-and-death emergency).

Why should the requirements for an Amateur Radio license be determined by what other radio services do, rather than by what Amateur Radio operators do?

None of those were Amateur Radio, however. And in this age of cell phones, most people with one have probably "communicated by radio" from the sea, a moving vehicle, a stationary vehicle, while walking, etc.

Radio sets like those used in aircraft and the PRC-8 are designed to be used by people with minimal radio skills. They're a means to an end, not the end itself.

The fact of the matter, Len, is that even with all your claimed experience, you could not communicate by radio with my Amateur Radio station. Nor with many other Amateur Radio stations. Besides the legal issues of a license, you just don't have the skills.

I think that's what really bugs you in all this.

There are many things I can do better than you, Len. Morse Code is only one of them.

Because they're all good things, Len.

I think you would like it if Amateur Radio became just like cb,

That's not a project, Len.

None of them was a "how to build it" article, though.

And the whole "Digital Techniques" stuff was in QST more than 5 years earlier.

learned it quickly and moved on.

It's still a license requirement, and it's a useful skill in Amateur Radio.

But that's obvious.

A lot of people are on call 24/7 in their jobs, Len. Many do not have all the personnel you had at ADA, either.

I've worked longer than 34 hours at a stretch more than a few times,
too. I don't recommend it, but it can be done.

It doesn't matter what someone else has done, Len - if they disagree with you, it's guaranteed you'll make fun of them and their accomplishments. So why should anyone tell you what they've done?

Is that a problem?

How many radio amateurs are enforcement problems because of their youth?

"MATURITY of RESPONSIBILITY"?

Did you mean "maturity and responsibility"?

If so, I agree!

> If you still think that 6 year olds and > 9 year olds are MATURE, your head isn't on straight.

Can you name even one case where the "maturity" of a young radio amateur was an issue in an FCC enforcement action?

Licensed Amateur Radio has existed in the USA since 1912. That's 96 years, and in all that time the FCC and its regulatory predecessors have never seen fit to have any kind of age or "maturity" requirement. Yet you, Leonard H. Anderson, somehow know better than the FCC on the issue - even though you haven't presented even one example of a problem caused by the lack of an age requirement.

And your proposed age requirement would have been 14 years - based on nothing!

>From the enforcement letters I've seen, the worst offenders in the Amateur Radio service are much closer to your age, Len.

> If nine-year-olds can become Extras, then what does that > say about the MATURITY level of other Extras? :-)

It says the FCC is satisfied that they can be mature enough to operate an Amateur Radio station, Len.

OTOH, your behavior here indicates that you, Len, are nowhere near mature enough to operate an Amateur Radio station. It's a good thing you're on Usenet and not the Amateur Radio bands.

It's not a manufactured dispute, Len. You brought it up, now you don't want to hear about it.

Let's review that one:

You and some of your neighbors tried to keep the zoning ordinances in your neighborhood stuck in the past. Despite all the changes that have occured since the early 1960s, you did not want the zoning changed. You wanted a piece of undeveloped land near your house developed only in ways you approved of. Anyone who wanted to live or build in your neighborhood should have to do it the way you did it, and no other way. People trying to Get Into Sun City had to pass muster - go through a hazing ritual - in the way you determined, even though so much has changed since the early 1960s.

Except the zoning commission disagreed.

In the case of food, professional doesn't always mean better. In fact, it rarely does.

But you don't say why you are so obsessed with it.

Nope - it's quite clear how personal it is to you. You make personal attacks on those who disagree with you, simply because they disagree.

> You two need to take a look at what YOUR personal motives

Why?

You're the one who is obsessed, Len.

> Several possibilities exist there:

> 1. Either of you (or both) are just Code Bigots,

You mean like people who cannot tolerate dissenting opinions without calling others names, making fun of their work, religion, gender, ethnicity, education, government/military service, etc.?

> 2. Either of you (or both) are control freaks determined > to make all obey YOUR commands.

You mean like people who want to control the requirements for a license they do not want, for a radio service in which they have no participation?

You mean like people who want to control what their neighbors do with their own property, and want the law to remain unchanged from the 1960s?

> 3. Neither of you, despite claims otherwise, understand

Morse Code is neither dead nor dying in Amateur Radio, though.

> 4. Either of you (or both) are scared that removal of Actually, the opposite is true.

Back when only a few hams had Extras, that license was seen as a major accomplishment. When I got my Extra way back in 1970, less than 3% of US hams had that license. Many hams thought 20 wpm was amazingly fast Morse Code, particularly when copied with pencil and paper. There was similar awe surrounding the written exams.

But over time, more and more hams got Extras. Tens of thousands of hams, young and old, from all walks of life, found that with a bit of practice and study they could pass 20 wpm code and all the theory tests. They found it wasn't nearly as hard as they had once thought.

Lower the requirements and the reverse will happen.

> 5. Either of you (or both) are elitist snobs who have > the "deep insecurity" of NEEDING rank-status-title

Well, Len, you've really described yourself in all of that. You tell us, over and over, about your rank-status-title stuff.

> Either of you (or both) fit one of those 5 things above, > possibly several of them.

Nope.

The correct answer is:

6. Both of us think that since Morse Code is widely used in Amateur Radio, and has brings many advantages and benefits to the Amateur Radio service, a basic test of Morse Code skill
should be required for an Amateur Radio license.

That's the plain and simple fact of it. Nothing more.

btw, in my comments to FCC on the recent NPRM, I suggested that the Canadian solution be applied. All that would be required to change is that if someone passed the General written with a score of 85% or higher, they would get credit for Element 1 as well as Element 3. Getting an Extra would require having a General and passing Element 4.

The result would be that a person could get a General or Extra the same way as today (with code test) or, by doing a bit better on the General written, they could get a General or Extra without the code test.

Rules changes would be minimal. Nobody would have to take a Morse Code test, yet no one could say that standards were reduced.

Why couldn't the USA adopt the solution that's working in Canada?

> Irrelevant and a detail as to > which but your actions DO show fitting at least one of > them.

Nope.

OTOH, your actions fit all of them! All that has to be done is to replace the word "code" with "anticode" and the five items you described are all about you, Len.

But we knew that...

> Both of you have to understand that there are a > great number of other citizens who also wish the code > test removal.

Where are they? They were outnumbered in comments to FCC. The majority of those commenting wanted at least some code testing to remain - remember, Len?

Ah, the old presuming-your-conclusion...

You need to work on your Morse Code skills, Len - and your people skills....

You read up on it.

I already know that ARRL volunteer positions, elected or otherwise, do not pay.

So the available pool of applicants are either retired, on public assistance, or both.

People with up to date knowledge from the industry, such as Carl, need not apply.

Now get over yourself.

Sounds about right. I wonder if Val worked at Radio Shack, if he would be ineligible for an ARRL elected office (i.e., a volunteer)???

Robesin suffers from "victimitus."

First he attacks with some incredibly sick accusations. In this attack, he trips up and says something stupid, something perhaps unintended, perhaps true, perhaps false. When that is exposed for what it is, he runs up the victim flag.

Now he wants to "tell" the women folk.... I guess they're supposed to put us on bread and water rations, and withold marital relations because Robesin says so....

That's so funny.

We know what Robesin is going to do even before he does. It's called a "Profile." The rat is in a maze of his own making.

I wonder if he "talked" to the women folk when running morale calls on NMC MARS from Okinawa? "Saw you husband at the hitchin post talking to one of the bar girls the other night..." or "Your husband was making fun of me making fun of other people..."

Sounds just like him on RRAP.

Hey, if you're good with taking part in illegal communications, then who am I to complain? You're the expert DXer, after all.

Eligibility? No. Are you going to put your theory into operation?

Then you'd be perfect for the job, except for that six meter/frenchmen debacle...

>phone, & CW.

WRONG, WRONG, WRONG...

It is voice, radiotelegraphy, data, pulse, right off the bat, plus a few others which you have NO idea they existed for EMERGENCIES.

Blowcode, you are stuck on HF ham thinking. So were some other morse zealots and morse bigots in this forum many years ago. Their scenarios were invalid comic-book stuff then and now you've just repeated the same. Deja phooey.

On HF you can find some EMERGENCY calling frequencies...but those aren't on ham bands. I recall only two, one for maritime, one for civil aviation over-ocean routes. Aviation has some more but you aren't worth the time to go look them up in the huge Part 2 regulations of Title 47 C.F.R. Both are VOICE.

Over or near land the aviation VHF frequency is 121.5 MHz.
Military aviation is 243 MHz. Both are VOICE. Airborne transponders (those are transmitter-receivers) has a "squawk" code just for emergencies and, in a pinch, you can push the IDENT button. Transponder output will automatically show up on ATCRBS radar displays. The little HTs in military parachute backpacks can do both VOICE and DME/TACAN (the 'pulse' I mentioned). [you probably don't know what DME or TACAN are yet they've been around for a half century.

On waterways (not open ocean) there are VHF frequencies for EMERGENCIES. VOICE. Go look those up in Part 2.
VHF VOICE is used in the USA in harbors and inland waterways. Need EMERGENCY frequencies on land? Plenty of those, band specific, organization specific, freqs available if you are serious about having to use them.
Those frequencies are kept open 24/7 in most areas and have emergency power backup. Three major land PLMRS bands, can you name them? [I didn't think so]

Ever hear of a cellular telephone? By now, I'll bet you noticed them. One in three Americans have one. Little 1 GHz HTs with lots of added features with tens of thousands of cell sites to connect to telco. You can punch up nine-one-one on them same as a wireline phone.
Nine-one-one is operated 24/7, done by professionals.
Cell sites and telephone exchanges all have "floating" emergency power, can remain operating on AC power outage.

Think you can call for a paramedic with your little "CW" transceiver, Blowcode? Or a fire truck? Police car?
Sorry, Blowcode, they use VOICE and above 30 MHz.
Some paramedic ambulances have EKG instruments with radio coupling to a hospital. Some police departments have data terminals IN their cars (LAPD does as do many adjacent incorporated cities here).

>All you need for phone is a microphone, All you need for CW >is a pencil and paper.

BWAAAAAHAAAA!!!!! How are you on "straight wire CW" Blowcode? Can you do 'twenty' just rubbing two bare wires together? [remember, you have to scrape OFF the insulation to make contact...]

>If you had to build a transmitter in an emergency, >a CW transmitter is simpliest to build.

!!!BUILD?!?!?!??? BWAAAAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!!!!

Is your QST featuring the "Tuna Tin Two" handy and able to survive a full EMERGENCY environment? Do you have the parts? Do you have a power-less soldering iron?
Do you know how to use hand tools? [I don't think so]

Once you've cobbled together something that MIGHT work, HOW DO YOU KNOW? Did you have test equipment that survived the EMERGENCY, Blowcode? [I'll bet you think so] How do you know you're on a frequency that you think is good for emergencies? You do "laying on of hands" to miraculously make it work? In this (unspecified) EMERGENCY do you have two functioning hands to use the tools to 'make' this thing? Will you need AC power to run it? Will it work on DC? From where will the electrical power come from? Rub two Handbooks together?
Cobbling together a one-tube transmitter MIGHT be possible, provided you have plans, the parts, a suitable tube, and the right values of components (which you seem to think you 'know' exactly?. It might take 24 hours or so...at which time the "emergency" would be over and the 'emergency' victims might be long dead.

You can spout bullshit bragging only so far. You've gone too far, Blowcode. You DEMONSTRATE that you can cobble together a simple 'transmitter' out of a pile of parts which do NOT know of ahead of time. SHOW US or someone. Put your money where your big mouth is.

Here's what the right-thinking folks do: Have a radio or radios ALREADY available for emergencies, along with a power source, on some 'emergency frequency' that you KNOW WILL BE HEARD. The "CW-saves-the-day" scenario is BS that went out before the GMDSS was activated seven years ago; the USCG is NOT monitoring the 500 KHz "CW" frequency and neither are many other equivalent national maritime aid agencies. A few years ago a gal teenager picked up a call for help on an FRS HT from a stranded mountain climbing team...voice, not "CW", miles away.
Made the Washington and Oregon newspapers. [FRS isn't on ham bands, Blowcode, and the gal wasn't a "radio op"]

>We are after all technical aren't we?

You (sure as hell) sound like you can barely wire up a doorbell. With a QST article on it to show you how.

>We're not just appliance operators.

Right...in addition you are an unthinking nuisance.

>Eliminating CW removes a way we can communicate.

Eliminating a code test does NOT "remove its use."

If morsemanship is so damn good, it DOESN'T NEED TESTING. Folks will take to it without needing to be tested if its such a wonderful thing.

>A simple way, where all >that's required is an ear, a pencil, and paper, and a skill.

Blowcode, you need a SKULL more than a skill...one with a working brain inside it. Try to get a new brain. Quickly.

Now go back to reading those comic books from the ARRL.
You know, the "Archie" ones that you saved up long ago.

Newsflash: ALL radio operators, code or no-code, are "appliance operators" as you colloquially state. A radio is a means to communicate. Knowing code just adds another way to use that radio.

Quite true, Opus! Thank you for pointing that out.

There is NOTHING about removing code testing that will stop you from using code. Wanna use code? Go ahead, knock yourself out. You can hammer on that key all night long, for all anybody cares. Hammer on it in your sleep. Hammer on it in the shower.

Tsk, tsk, tsk, "Buzz," if you look harder at Definitions and "Basis and Purpose" political boilerplate, you will see that amateur radio is for "non-essential communications" and done "without pecuniary interest!" That pretty much defines an AVOCATION, "Buzz." You know what? An avocation is a HOBBY! [amazing but true]

If you look farther in Title 47 Code of Federal Regulations you will see that ALL Parts use the word "service." [amazing but true]
The FCC uses the word "service" as a regulatory term defining a type and kind of radio. How about that Citizens Band Radio SERVICE, "Buzz?" :-) [got yer uniform on?]

Try not to look so ignorant.

We can get a FIVE-year-old to explain it to you?

Even if the no-code ticket was made 6 months or 2 years in active length it would not matter one bit. Amateur radio in the public eye is unknown and your average young person is far more interested in the Internet, online video, instant text messaging and cellphones. There are too many commercially available technologies, which are far cheaper I may add, than amateur radio which while a curosity is still a functionally and technologically obsolete pursuit. Sorry but that's the truth.

Several probelms there, fatboy.

First of all Morkie's not licensed to go there. He's already got enough law looking over his shoulder I doubt he'd risk going bootleg on frequencies he's not licensed for and add a federal violation to the pile.

Secondly, I wouldn't want him there...The notorious reputation of the frequency notwithstanding, I don't want him on 11 meters, let alone an Amateur allocation, trash-talking frequencies aside.

Lastly, there would be some expectation of Morkie acting at least marginally adult-like, and to tell you the truth, I like my odds on the Power Ball and Mega Millions a lot better.

So sit back, engage your kill filter, and have a nice day.

Or don't...I don't care.

How about a USA version of the Canadian solution:

1) No change to license classes.

2) Tech requires Element 2 (Tech written) same as now.

3) General requires a Tech license plus Elements 1 and 3 (5 wpm code, General written). If Element 3 is passed with 85% or better correct, credit is given for Element 1.

4) Extra requires a General or Advanced plus Element 4 (Extra written).

No new tests. No extra paperwork other than the VEs determining whether someone passed Element 3 with 74% or 85%. No reduction in requirements, just an alternate path.

Why not?

You might want to check that.

In many states it is illegal for a minor to buy, possess or use tobacco products. If a store sells tobacco to a minor, the minor is in possession, and both store and minor can be prosecuted.

Attempting to do an illegal thing can usually be prosecuted as well.

http://slati.lungusa.org/StateLegislateAction.asp

Of course the enforcement of these laws is uneven at best. But here in EPA, most stores will require ID of anyone who looks under 25 years of age before they will sell them tobacco products.

Even more interesting was the "pressure" he got from his "SSB them worthy enough of joining them on the air.

Of COURSE that's what he wants...

Then he can "Shack and Awe" the unwashed minions with his expertise

And no...I didn't mispell that...Lennie would drag folks into his "shack" and try to "awe" them with his Japanese SWL receiver.

The "RANK" of "professional"

The "TITLE" of "engineer"

The "STATUS" of unlicensed.

I guess if you pay good money for a correspondence course, the

OF COURSE!

What torque's Lennie's bolts is that there are 10 year old girls

Not one article in "Ham Radio" allegedly authored by Leonard H Anderson was ever subsequently footnoted in any other professional or amateur project or article...Other than his own.

None of the really "easy" things in MY life were the more satisfying ones....(except for this one redhead in Laguna Beach...but she's another thread!)

It was the one's where, at the end of the day, I knew I ahd put something into and subsequently got something in return that I knew I had accomplished something.

I guess this is why Lennie and Morkie "meld"...they are mutually intolerant of effort to get what they want.

Lennie spent a "career" in a back water radio station, crawling through benjo ditches. Then 50 years later he made up a whole passle of tales about Bear Bombers and "Incoming Artillery". he topped it off with stories of what a great soldier he'd been since he served in a unit that had KIA's THREE YEARS before he was even inducted. Lennie never even pulled ADY to the country where the KIA's occured.

Outright accusations.

And despite dogged hounding to pony-up on his evidence of such fraud, he never did.

There's no "parental permission" line on the current applications (never has been), and by all readings of the law, the unlicensed parent cannot supervise the child IRT Amateur Radio regulations!

Morkie and Toiddie don't have any problem trying to integrate children into an "adult activity"...Now if they'd just limit that to AMATEUR RADIO.....

I still say that he was "insulted" by Amateurs at some point and has since been on a vendetta to harass Amateurs wherever/however he can.

It's pure meaness, in other words.

I bet that "ham" best man of his took liberties with Mrs Lennie II.

Yep.

I was "Gunny" and "Steve" in private e mail until I told him that I appreciated his point of view but didn't agree with it.

Then the "nazi" stuff followed.

which to amke an INFORMED opinion.

Lennie's still got his puppy nose smushed up against the window

I'd argue against that one, Jim...for the same reason their

You'll never pass the test anyway, Markie. You are too lazy to study and lack the brains to even memorize the answers. That's why you are waiting for them to just give it to you.

newsgroup behavior in <8G4Jf.2196$JR6.1413@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:

"I'm sure that you have difficulty dealing with anyone unlike

Dave Vile the liar and hypocrite fails to follow his own advice and "Your saying so does not make your statement true. You may think it,

Hypocrite Dave Vile always demands answers to his questions but when <c6NTe.2493$9x2.1261@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:

"I am under no obligation to provide you answers just because you have questions."

is Amy Fireproof?" means Steve has just lied obviously that means very little else is worth ntoing and as should be obvious very little else will get done by steve will

all he has to do is STOP lying stoping claiming my wife is male stop calling me a child molestor

stop acussing me of welfare fraud

stop using libelous accusations against others to harrass them

apologize for calling my DAD a rapist

apologize for lying about the non existance of the 47th my old unit

apologize for lying about the non existance of the 214 fa of which it was part

1584. when is steve going to admit he lied in claiming he was misquotyed? What it's like to lick my excrement off of another man's genitals no misquote you are lying again

I also remember those fine days and have about 1 hour of recordings from that by-gone era that I would be willing to burn on a cd. It has everything from W4NTI going nuts to NR5T, FZ, and a bit where someone tells "brother John" how much he loves God. It will bring tears to your eyes.

1589. SHORTWAVE STATION OMEGA ONE RADIO STILL GOING STRONG!!

Low Power Shortwave station Omega One Radio is still going strong on 13.556.00 MHz in the the 22 meter shortwave band, Despite "complaints" on the newsgroup about the station. The station began in July of this year with a output of 5 watts and then increase it to 10 watts followed by 25 watts, then 50 watts and now is running with a power output of 100 watts. The station has been heard mostly out east, yet some people out in the western part of the United States claim that they too are also hearing this little station. The station runs 24 hours a day, 7 days a week and will continue to grow and improve itself and be the best it can be!!

If you were really modern, you'd be doing podcasts over the Internet, would reach the whole world and, best of all, would be legal. Short wave is dying. Most of the big SW stations are going off the air.

You should take a page out of Lloyd's book. You should use modern technology like a TRS-80 and an electret microphone.

I don't think so, The FCC wouldn't want this to go the federal courts, they have to explain themselves, which they (the FCC) don't want to do. They will have to explain why they lied all these years about the Waivering process and why a person who applied seven times for a license didn't get a license and why the FCC didn't even take the time of day to consider that persons waiver (the Federal courts has told the FCC repeatively that "THEY MUST CONSIDER WAIVERS". I also know people in the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications (the FCC boss) who are asking the same question. You see this isn't like K1MAN, there is a lot more too it then what you know.....and the FCC doesn't want to have to go the courts to explain themselves.

True, TRS-80s are a little classier than a Mac, but serious technophiles should try to get hold of one. I hear that you can purchase them used, so maybe that would be a viable option for you.

Once you have experienced the awesome power of a screaming, 4.77 MHz Z80 processor, you will never go back. TRS-80s rule, Dude.

Jim, this is one of the fairest replies that I've seen from you in a long time.

But why is it that the judicial system relies upon people seeing that they have a conflict of interest and recuse themselves, but amateurs cannot? Is amateur radio more important than the judicial system that you have to refuse top notch talent so that a conflict can never occur? so that a person cannot show that they have integrity and recuse themselves?

I find it incredible that you remain silent on the Robesin outrages, then criticize me for pointing out how sick they are.

At least we now know where you stand on the issue.

I suggested something similar many years ago - that the Morse code exam be folded into the written exam and one score obtained.
I think I suggested that the Morse code exam be 20% of the score.
Others wanted the Morse code exam to be 80% of the score.

BUZZZZZZZZ! Wrong answer! We were looking for "1.77" Mhz.

The Model 1 was 1.77 Mhz, the Model 2 was 4 Mhz, the Model 3 was 2 Mhz, the Model 4 was 4 Mhz.

But thanks for playing!

everything from W4NTI going nuts to NR5T, FZ, and a bit where someone

You got it right, Brian. Robesin the fraud is "walking wounded" from his "eighth 'hostile action'" forays.

Maybe we should "call the VA?" :-)

>Now he wants to "tell" the women folk.... I guess they're supposed to

It's a tragic comedy in one long, tiresome ACT.

>We know what Robesin is going to do even before he does. It's called a >"Profile." The rat is in a maze of his own making.

One thing different: His maze has NO doorways. He keeps struggling, trying to get out, but can't climb the maze walls. That's the problem with his HALO drop into the maze...he didn't reconnoiter his drop zone beforehand.

Now he cries and cries about being stuck in his own maze...

>I wonder if he "talked" to the women folk when running morale calls on >NMC MARS from Okinawa? "Saw you husband at the hitchin post talking to

>Sounds just like him on RRAP.

Robesin is a MORSEMAN. He can make fun of others but goes berserk when he gets "return fire?" Him poor "victim."
So sad. Behavior fully condoned by other morsemen in here.

Sigh...all that BLUFFING by the Last Action Hero. All he needs to do is present something to document 18 years of his life in the corpse. He's never done that. All we've gotten is the "call the VA" shout.

The VA won't tell, can't tell everything to just anyone.
Regulations are clear that only kin or a legitimate agency can get such information...and the VA would get it from NARA, the National Archives and Records Agency...which is accessible over the Internet and even has forms and instructions for kin to get their relations' information.

No, not with his "company man" statements about loving morse and willing to toe the line drawn by the wire-pullers in Newington. The ARRL can do no wrong.

Besides, with Heil and Miccolis' endorsements, he would be a shoe-in. No problem. Huzzah! :-)

The WORK only required concentration. What was HARD was not the work but something else. Consider that I had this female living with me that, well, maybe you can pick up a romance novel and read about what would happen. You don't seem to know much about such things, only amateur radio and morsemanship...

>You gave up, Len. You said yourself that it was hard work, didn't you?

No, Jimmy. I explained it to you but your can't see that.

Choices. Return on Investment. MORE IMPORTANT things to do. Knowledge that morse code communications was on the way OUT in every other radio service...even in the early 1960s. "Amateur radio" was a novelty offshoot, something that might be fun as a pastime...NOT the main goal in life that you seem to think it is.

I QUIT "studying" morsemanship, Jimmy. Wasn't worth it to me to become a 1930s-era "radio op" swearing timeless allegiance to amateurdom. I'd already WORKED in Big Time HF radio communications. I'd already gotten a First Class Radiotelephone (Commercial) license seven years before that decision point. Did I "need" this? NO. At that point I wasn't a teenager (who didn't have to work for a living) imagining ever-lasting glory as a ham working DX on HF with CW.
I had a mate and we were planning an entire LIFE together at that time. "Ham" radio was NOT high up on any personal priorities then...if it was even penciled-in at the bottom.

>The point was that you tried and then gave up.

Mother Superior never gives up, does she?

I QUIT bothering with morsemanship, Jimmy. That's all there was to that.

Morsemanship is NOT one of the Ten Commandments, Jimmy. Neither is becoming a licensed radio amateur. Try for some perspective. You NEED some because your point of view goes right to the vanishing point, all one-dimensional.

>Didn't US manufacturers make cb sets?

E. F. Johnson, Bendix, General Radiotelephone (the Burbank CA company) and just about every other company that ever made a radio in the USA. In a decade they would all QUIT because they couldn't compete with lower-cost offshore production designs.

What has THAT old history to do with your attempt at character assassination of someone's "morals?"

>> >But learning Morse Code to the 13 wpm level needed for a General

>Your behavior here says otherwise, Len.

Poor baby...nobody coming over to admire your work and pretty certificates on the wall in your "radio room?"

I've been talking all along about ending the morse code
TEST for an amateur radio license in the USA.

It is the morsemen who confuse TEST with USE in here.

>Even though you don't seem to want such a license.

Yes. Why do you think one "should" get an amateur license? To work DX on HF with CW? Make "lifelong friends" through one brief one-minute "contact" around the globe? To have friends and neighbors "admire all the dedication?" :-)

>> You've manufactured a "moral defect" which didn't exist.

Tsk, Mother Superior got herself a new ruler, is busy trying it out. Mother Superior has that nasty habit.

:-) Mother Superior is very hard of understanding.

>In any event, it doesn't change the fact that you gave up trying to >learn Morse Code because it was too much work for you.

Mother, er, Jimmy, I simply QUIT trying to be cognizant of morse code. :-)

There ARE other things in life, Jimmy. Really. You should try them some time.

>You've also left out the fact of how much Morse Code is actually used >on the HF amateur bands - then and now.

What has that to do with your stubborn insistence about "giving up" and "too hard?" Did you run out of character assassination bullets? :-)

>In other words, it was hard work because it took you a lot of time to >learn it.

Whoops, Mother Superior reloaded her ruler. :-)

>None of that changes the fact that you gave up trying to learn Morse >Code because it was too much work for you.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Mother keeps hitting the lectern where she lectures all day. Too bad she missed the knuckles.

>I'm sorry for your loss, Len. It's clear some things were delayed.

Go and commit auto-sexual-intercourse, Mother. Your "sympathy" expressions are just semantic boilerplate.
SINCERITY is missing.

One can picture Jimmy coming up to the burial party,
"Pssst...you should work on your morse code!" :-(

>The fact is that you gave up because it was too much work for you. If >it were easy for you to learn, you would have learned it quickly and >passed the 13 wpm test long before 1963.

WHY? If you say it "was too hard for me" why would I have "learned it quickly" before then?

>1964 was 42 years ago, Len. From your accounts of your personal >history, you never again tried to learn Morse Code, nor to get any >class of amateur license. But you've had plenty of time to argue about >it, and make fun of others who have done what you have not.

Ahem...the elitist morsemen, the SUPERIOR radio ops, seem to think that anyone not doing what They did is a negative attribute. :-)

Yas, yas, I've heard that SUPERIORIY expressed for a half century by amateurs. "We are morsemen and we're okay!" All the while radiotelegraphy use everywhere else but amateur radio is either dead, dying, or stillborn.

Your idea of the ARS is "Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society." You really should Petition the FCC to change the title and definitions of Part 97, Title 47 C.F.R.

>It's not about me, Len.

Tsk, Mother. It is ALL about you and morsemanship... and the moral defects of those you label as "giving up because it was too hard to learn." :-)

>In amateur radio, you're not even a Novice yet.

I can't be. Have you forgotten your "numbers" postings boilerplate? No new Novice class licenses are issued!

>Sure you do, Len. That's part of why you behave the way you do here.

Tsk. I am enjoying the amusement I get out of puncturing self-righteous hot-air balloons of morsemen.

Pop! Pop! Pop! Har har har har... :-)

>In any event, it doesn't change the fact that you gave up trying to

Was Mother Superior ever in the USMC? :-)

>The plain and simple fact is that Morse Code skill is needed to pass >one of the license tests for an Amateur Radio license with HF/MF

Sweetums, THE PLAIN AND SIMPLE FACT is that some of us have been trying to CHANGE THE REGULATIONS of US amateur radio by advocating the elimination of the CODE TEST. NOT the USE of radiotelegraphy, just the elimination of the CODE TEST.

You just can't differentiate between TEST and USE. Is that too hard for you?

>The fact is that lots of Amateur Radio operators do use Morse Code.

Lots MORE do NOT. :-)

Now, if you are going into semantics quibbling about numbers, you'd best show YOUR stats first. :-)

This isn't 1912, Jimmy. Really. Despite your longing to be back in pioneering days of radio, you can't be there.

>Amateur Radio is not part of those other radio services - it's a >separate and distinct radio service.

Just like Radio Control Radio Service? :-)

[Part 95, Title 47 C.F.R.]

>Why should the requirements for an Amateur Radio license be determined

Aren't ham radio operators the "pool" from which the nation can draw from? Did you pee in the pool, JImmy?

Tsk, tsk, tsk...I've already done that, Jimmy. :-)

>I think that's what really bugs you in all this.

You don't THINK, Jimmy, you REACT. Somebody says the least thing negative about radiotelegraphy and you go off on a LECTURE spasm all about your accomplishments, how you were a teen-age waswolf, er, ham (hairless variety) and how all amateurs "SHOULD" become radiotelegraphers.

Very predictable. You've done it just now.

"Good" for WHAT, Jimmy? So you can preen and posture with your title, rank, status, privilege over others? Sure looks that way. You did it via morsemanship, regulations lobbied for by older morsemen who started before your time. You want to be BETTER than others, Jimmy, be "admired by your friends and neighbors" visiting your radio room.

>I think you would like it if Amateur Radio became just like cb,

"Useful" only for doing radiotelegraphy. :-)

The FCC has NO requirement for radio amateurs to ONLY use radiotelegraphy.

The LAW requiring a morse code test can be ELIMINATED, Jimmy. Really. It isn't a God-given Commandment. You are free to use radiotelegraphy all you want. Enjoy.
Just don't try to force others to do as you had to do.

We don't know where or if you work at all, Jimmy. You've never served in the military yet you claim "more knowledge" about the military than any veteran. Oh, and C Company [that's Transmitters at the time] only had about a hundred personnel total; four operating teams of about a dozen men each, only one team on duty at any one time.

>I've worked longer than 34 hours at a stretch more than a few times, >too. I don't recommend it, but it can be done.

Never fails. Jimmy da morseman can do "everything" better, faster than any no-code-test-advocate. Sort of like "citius, altius, morseus" in "radiosport." :-)

You want PRAISE for being a retrograde radiotelegrapher in a hobby activity?!? BWAAAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!

Sweetums, long ago you came on in the archtypical Mother Superior attitude, parroting ARRL-speak, sounding like you were 120 years old or something, speaking Maxims as if you invented radio and amateur radio. And that was on an AOL newsgroup, not this one! :-) Always, always, ALWAYS with this "morsemanship is the best" PR BS on the burner. Let's see, you were this wunderkind who became an extra amateur before high school graduation, worked PART-time through college to get two degrees.

And now you work for some organization somewhere involved in the "transportation industry?" You put something like that in a Comment to the FCC, right? You haven't said it in here, have you?

>So why should anyone tell you what they've done?

No problem. If you claim to have invented radio, fine, you are honest because you are an Extra and you are a MORSEMAN! Everyone understands that "you're a morseman and you're okay." [the Circus is in town!]

Tsk, tsk, Mother Superior grabs Herr Robust's swagger stick and beats on a 7-year dead horse! All because you need to denigrate a no-code-test advocate who disagreed with your absolute rules? [on FCC 98-143, the NPRM which eventually became the latest "restructuring" of US amateur radio]

You really love Necro-Equine Flagellation, don't you? :-)

>How many radio amateurs are enforcement problems because of their

Let it GO, Jimmy. That old argument of yours is senile and in dementia. That was over seven years ago and the FCC did their decision thing and "restructuring" (of 2000) happened.

>> If you still think that 6 year olds and

Try answering the subject. Here it is again as a question: DO YOU THINK 6 YEAR OLDS AND 9 YEAR OLDS ARE MATURE?

Well, do you?

>OTOH, your behavior here indicates that you, Len, are nowhere near >mature enough to operate an Amateur Radio station. It's a good thing >you're on Usenet and not the Amateur Radio bands.

BWAAAHAHAHA!!!! Jimmy, eat my shorts. :-)

Mother Superior, go to the laundry room...you may have wet yourself getting so angry. :-)

The FCC thought I was mature enough to issue a First
'Phone license to me in 1956...three decades later they issued me a PLMRS station license for business purposes.
Before that the US Army thought I was mature enough to supervise an HF communications operating team in 1954.
Several electronics corporations have thought me mature enough to have design responsibility on corporate work in electronics.

But, YOU say I'm "nowhere near mature enough to operate an amateur radio station?!?" BWAAAAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!

Doogie Micollis, PhD (Piled higher Deeper) says NO!

>Let's review that one:
>You and some of your neighbors tried to keep the zoning ordinances in >your neighborhood stuck in the past.

Okay, so this is retro on not on amateur radio, but let's review how Jimmy MANUFACTURES something out of nothing.

When the original part of my "neighborhood" was zoned, it was all Residential, Single Family homes. Normally such residential zones remain as-is for many decades.
They aren't whim-changed to the "latest model" in zoning codes...especially residential zones. Those who live IN those residences aren't "stuck in the past." A house is a house is a HOME.

>Despite all the changes that have >occured since the early 1960s, you did not want the zoning changed.

What were "all the changes that have[sic] occured since the early 1960s" in my neighborhood, Jimmy? You really don't know, do you? Several hundred houses were completed in my 'neighborhood,' all to R zoning code (single family, residential). About 15 acres were never developed in the middle of that due to too much earthmoving necessary. That remained undeveloped for about 38 years, ownership of that land passing through several companies. The next-to-the-last land owner wanted to change the zoning laws to "R1" which meant multi-family residences...read APARTMENTS. That owner managed to get the zoning code changed over the protests of several of us and the neighborhood association at a city zoning board meeting in the middle of the 1990s.

Those of us who LIVED adjacent to that undeveloped property had to accept it. Several years went by and nothing came of the plans presented to the neighborhood at the local church meeting hall. Land values were rising.

The next-to-the-last land owner went bankrupt and the 15 acre parcel was sold to a developer who requested a neighborhood association public review of what they wanted. We met, three meetings in all. This developer planned for 44 homes, all single-family residences, all meeting the ORIGINAL zoning code requirements. That developer needed 9 months of earth moving about a quarter million cubic yards of soil to make those lots; it was a VERY rough terrain to begin with. The 44 houses were built (sold before completion, despite the rising cost of homes) in a gated community called "Montelena." Very upscale. The neighborhood association did not fight that. We were back to the original zoning code, all single family residences.

>You
>wanted a piece of undeveloped land near your house developed only in >ways you approved of.

Absolutely, but as the neighborhood association as a group wanted it (over 400 residence members). Those of us who OWN residences and LIVE in them understand that a residence area should change zoning laws as little as possible.

>Anyone who wanted to live or build in your >neighborhood should have to do it the way you did it, and no other way.

Bad repetition in addition to being highly inaccurate. The neighborhood association wanted the original single-family residence zoning kept. Not just me, several hundred others all were of the same opinion about our homes and adjacent areas. Oh, and there are dozens of basic house plans in several hundred acres of "my" neighborhood and only 2 others are of the same plan as mine. Your "no other way" allegation is baseless and rather juvenile. :-)

>People trying to Get Into Sun City had to pass muster - go through a >hazing ritual - in the way you determined, even though so much has >changed since the early 1960s.

I have NO idea what the requirements are for Sun City. Never been there. Isn't that in another state? "My" neighborhood is NOT a retirement community, Jimmy. My city is a suburb of the city of Los Angeles, adjacent to the incorporated city of Burbank, CA, and L.A. suburbs of North Hollywood, Arleta, Sunland, and Tujunga. Arleta is the only "city" that was created since 1970 and it is several miles away; it was just a political-boundary change out of parts of Sun Valley and Pacoima.

>Except the zoning commission disagreed.

Los Angeles has NO jurisdiction in Sun City, sweetums.

Tsk, tsk, Jimmy tries to equate LIVING with amateur radio morsemanship. He must "live" in that, his fantasy world of beeps and sounds...and up ahead a sign, the Jimmyzone!

>> Ralphs, Vons, Albertsons chains all sell food made by >> professional food growers and producers.

>Not Ralphs. Ralph's.

INCORRECT. That supermarket chain has a copyrighted corporate name, logo of RALPHS. No apostrophe.

Jimmy, you got my post office city name WRONG and you try to correct me on spelling a common food supermarket chain, one that we shop at regularly?

You not only need to work on your people skills but also your geographic skills. :-)

Use Mapquest if you have to, but don't venture into areas you have NO knowledge about...unless you WANT to get shot down.

>> The code test issue was never about me or "whether or not >> I get a license."
>
>Then why are you so obsessed with it, Len?

"Obsession" is yours, retrograde amateur morseman. :-)

As a supposed electronics professional you don't seem unaware of how much the electronics-radio field has changed in your lifetime. [not my problem]

YOU are obsessed with morsemanship and try to anchor a hobby activity to standards and practices that existed long before you were born. You denigrate anyone against the retention of the code test at every opportunity.

I'm just advocating the elimination of the code test for a US amateur radio license, any class. If morse code telegraphy is so great, noble, and true, people will take it up on their own; there's no valid reason a federal agency has to enforce morsemanship by a license test. The only "reasons" presented by the amateur morsemen are emotional, they had to test for it so everyone else has to test for it.

There has NEVER been a manual operating skill test for any other allocated mode other than morsemanship since 1912 and the creation of the first US radio regulatory agency...yet the FCC has many allocated modes in US amateur radio. Further, the FCC (created in 1934, 72 years ago) does NOT mandate sole morse code use by US radio amateurs, any class. Even further, the USA has not been bound by any ITU-R radio regulations absolute mandate to maintain a code test for an amateur license for 3 years since July, 2003, the end of WRC-03.

You need to take a look at what YOUR personal motives are in taking it so hard about those of us who seek removal of the code test. Several possibilities exist there:

1. You are just a Code Bigot. Bigots always approve actions of similar bigotry in others.

2. You are a control freak determined to make all obey YOUR commands.

3. You should understand that manual morse code is a dead or dying mode in ALL radio services; there is NO need to keep the manual morse test to provide a "pool" of trained morsemen for the national interest.

4. You are scared that removal of the code test will end your bragging rights, of self-defined "importance" of rank-title-status-privilege based largely on morsemanship.

5. You are an elitist snob who has the "deep insecurity" of NEEDING rank-status-title to make you appear "better" than others.

6. You are a supreme egotist, judging all on your accomplishments and denying those of others.

You fill at least one of those 6 things above, possibly several; irrelevant and a detail as to which but your actions DO show fitting at least one of them. You have to understand that there are a great number of other citizens who also wish the code test removal. You have to understand that such a position is NOT some idiotic moral imperfection but rather a reasonable opinion based on the advancement of technology of all radio by this first decade of the new millennium.

You keep using the term "volunteers". We're not discussing volunteers volunteer to be on the Board of Directors. The rules governing such elections are clear.

The judicial system isn't under discussion and radio amateurs aren't under discussion. ARRL elections are under discussion. The ARRL has a system which has worked for decades. Carl was recused--for a long time.

The judicial system wasn't under discussion. When you start "Brian's Actually, you don't. I've not told you where I stand. Mark Morgan has flooded this newsgroup with his nonsense for months. The best I can say

No, Robeson does not believe Roger. Never has so far as I know. He, like the rest of us, knows Roger for what he is. Robeson dislikes Wiseman as much as you.
You seem to be as fixated on Robeson as Roger is on Lloyd. Yes, you can decide what is in your best interest, but bear in mind that you are beginning to sound not unlike Wiseman insofar as your constant commentary concerning Robeson is concerned. Want some friendly advice? You would be well advised to show a bit of maturity and "tone it down" a notch or two and step back from the fray. When one wrestles in the mud with pigs, one soon

Many years ago I had an elderly, incontinent blowhard uncle much like Len. He, like Len, had much to say about whatever the topic du jour was and, like Len, my old uncle talked much but said little. He simply liked hearing himself pontificate. It afforded him a modicum of self worth and we humored him as he prattled on and on.

Carry on, Len. I'm sure you will.

There's going to be metal music and drinking/smoking at my funeral, which will be at my house since I'll be in an urn, then have my ashes spread in the woods near the Missouri river. I'm almost looking forward to it. <g>
I'm sure there are a few that will be happy to see me go. <eg> Fuck them.

Here are Toad's own words from rec.radio.amateur.misc, posted 9/2/06:

"Not according to people who had accually heard the station. I have a number of people locally and as far away as Maryland, New York, and other locations that heard the station and has email me and written me and says ti's doing just fine. the stations far away say there is no signal but the audio is really good."

If there is no signal how can they hear it? Toad has yet to explain that one.

By the way, Markie, what makes you think this is my first appearance?

Dance, Markie, DANCE!

It's not at all unusual, especially with SSB signals, to have a signal so low it doesn't register on an S meter, and yet be perfectly clean and copiable.

> No, Robeson does not believe Roger.
Robeson claims he does and Robeson claim every word he posts is truth
so I am inclined to believe him on that score

..odd, that. For weeks you have been accusing Robeson of being a liar. Why now do you choose to believe him? How convenient.

> Never has so far as I know. He, like the > rest of us, knows Roger for what he is. Robeson dislikes Wiseman as much as > you.

funny he says otherwise
Quote where Robeson agrees with Wiseman. Just one will do.

> You seem to be as fixated on Robeson as Roger is on Lloyd.
prehaps to you

but as I see it I fix on those that are attacking me, be it Robeson or wismen or someone else

But as "you see it" counts for little. You initiated much of this trash with your stupidly insipid "get help" trolls. You were set after because you were, quite simply, stupid. When others called your attention to the fact you whined that you were being "attacked".

inded the thread you choose to use to deliver this advise is about Wismen not robeson

It is about YOU, like it or not.

or rather I'd ;like friendly advice not someelse telling me to violate my moral concense

Had you any moral conscience, you'd ignore the likes of Wiseman and Slow Code and simply shut the Hell up!

I do I don't for example fabricate lies to attack my foes

You continue to accuse Robeson of making posts he did not make. That makes you a liar. And the fact that you were once caught red-handed forging a post over Robeson's name lends no credibility to yourself.
That and your fifteen plus sock-puppets is proof enough that you are almost,
not quite, but almost as warped as Wiseman.

Foes? You'd have no foes, Mark, were you to learn when to butt out and use your computer to play Pac Man.
Facts are facts, Mark. The percieved "attacks" you feel are aimed toward you are brought on by your own, oft enwelcomed comments to Usenet posters. You brought this upon yourself. Simple as that.

The judicial system does not rely primarily on people recusing themselves. In fact, that's pretty much a last resort.

Take jury selection. Here in Pennsylvania, there are lots of occupations and associations that will get someone eliminated from different types of cases.

For example, in a personal-injury case, being in the insurance industry, the medical industry, or law enforcement will usually disqualify you. In fact, if a close family member or a good friend is in those industries, it greatly reduces your chances of being on that jury. That's all based on the possibility of a potential conflict of interest.

On top of that, both sides have the right to object to the selection of a particular person. They can object for a specified reason (such as not wanting a juryperson whose relative worked in the insurance industry, because that person might not want to hand out big awards in a personal injury case). They can also object for no specified reason at all. The number of objections is limited, but usually enough to keep people with possible conflicts off the jury.

OTOH, a potential jury member cannot recuse themselves. They can give the jury commission reasons to not choose them, but ultimately it is not their decision.

In a jury case, it is ultimately the jury who decide the outcome, just as in the ARRL BoD, it is the directors and vice directors who decide policy. Neither depends on self-disqualification (recusing) to prevent conflict of interest.

Similar rules apply to judges. Usually a judge will recuse himself or herself if there is an apparent conflict of interest, because to not do so makes the judge look incompetent. The judges all know that the various sides in a case will make a lot of noise about such a conflict, too, and have legal recourse. The methods of deciding which judge gets which case are another safeguard against conflicts of interest.

On top of all this, a judge doesn't usually have any other job, while directors and vice directors often do.

The point of all this is that the judicial system does not depend primarily on self-disqualification to prevent conflicts of interest. Nor should it!

> Is amateur radio more important than the judicial system that

Carl may be top-notch in his specific technical fields. But whether he is top-notch in dealing with the issues of the ARRL BoD is another matter, and open to opinion.

Some make the mistake of assuming that a person who is technically knowledgeable in one area is automatically knowledgeable in all related areas. Some make the mistake of assuming that a person who is technically knowledgeable in one area is automatically a good manager, negotiator, teacher, or spokesperson. None of that is a given - in fact, it's an extreme rarity. We've seen examples of how self-proclaimed "PROFESSIONALS" can behave very poorly on newsgroups...

In Carl's case, I think the ARRL BoD erred on the side of caution. I supported letting him run for the office in my division, and letting the membership decide. I still support that position, even though I'm not sure I'd vote for Carl (it would depend on who the other candidates were).

btw, the ARRL BoD is a widely varied group, not just a bunch of retired guys. Their opinions are all over the map - that's why their proposals are obviously compromises between the various groups.

UPI; ATHENS, ALABAMA:

Last night, as most of us slept, local police conducted a massive sting operation targeted at the city's prostitutes. Several officers from the Athens Police Department watched and waited as prostitutes walked up and down the streets of downtown, leaning in car after car, only to be arrested after driving away in the car and a transaction had clearly been made. The head of the Athens Task Force reported at least 12 arrests of prostitutes and several dozen potential customers. Nobody was hurt in the operation.

However, back at the station, Police were surprised to find in one case that they had arrested a transvestite prostitute. Police identified Lloyd Austin Davies as a known transvestite in the Athens area, but failed to identify the sicko during the arrest. It wasn't until hours later when Davies stood up in the holding tank and urinated through the bars when police were able to identify the Davies as a transvestite.

After posting bail, Davies, a respected member of the gay community, is now registered as a known sex offender in Athens. When asked by reporters if Davies' customers were ever surprised, he replied, "My customers are mostly breast men."
Davies then squeezed his man-boobs through his filthy tee shirt.

Wheeling, WV. (AP)

In what has been described as a case for the record books, doctors at Wheeling Hospital surgically removed a missing Alabama man from the rectum of a well-known local wacko this past weekend.

Dave Heil an obnoxious local eccentric presented himself to the hospital emergency room on Saturday, complaining of abdominal discomfort and extreme constipation. After performing a CAT scan, physicians were flabbergasted when the images showed a full-grown 250 lb adult male lodged completely within Heil's lower colon.

Heil revealed that the intestinal blockage was none other than Lloyd Davies, reported as missing from Athens, Alabama last week after failing to show up for work at Papa John's Pizza.

Mr. Heil, who formerly was an flunky State Dept. employee to a third world country and married to a finnish call girl, had a long term relationship with Davies who is a known homosexual.

He revealed that Mr. Davies, who has been a long-time friend and lover of Heil, made a special trip to Cameron, West Virginia to cheer up his mentor by engaging in a protracted session of ass-kissing.

According to Heil, the analingus got somewhat out of hand. Mr. Davies apparently performed his duties with such enthusiasm that he was sucked bodily into Heil's lower intestinal tract by the involuntary muscular contractions associated with orgasm.

Neither Davies nor Heil appear to have suffered any permanent injury from this unusual incident. Doctors successfully removed Davies using copious quantities of canola oil, and with the assistance of plumbers from a local septic tank cleaning service.

Davies, who explained that he is quite used to eating excrement, evidently found more than enough nourishment to survive his 3-day stint in Heil's rectal cavity.

After a thorough hosing-off, Davies was put on an Greyhound bus back to Athens, Alabama.

Code is dead - along with anything else that requires skill, practice, or a little bit of effort.

The folks who want to do away with code should at least learn it and try it - they might find it to be (gasp) enjoyable. Personally, I could support doing away with no-code licensing altogether. I realize it won't happen, but I gotta think that if I managed to learn Morse code, then so can "they". The only thing no-code licensing accomplished in this neck of the woods was to move the CB mentality from 11 to 2 meters.

"Asre", "Arfe", "Markei", "Contur".

You give really good advice, UnWiseman.

What spelling method did you use?

The extra class license should definitely require a score of 100 % to pass .
As it is now all the exams are way to easy . It's a give away .

learn to use a buggy whip to good effect on and horseless carage Idon't think so I felt like taking a whip to mine the last time it ran out of gas nothing would happened Buggy whip are abolslutely useless wth horseless carrages expect I supose to get better service at the

And you are stuck on Lazy-ass appliance operator thinking. Why don't you head on over to rec.radio.cb, they need help using their appliances and you'll fit right in.

I can hear Todd's 13.556 pirate station nearly fifteen hours a day, and I can tell you all the titles of the songs he plays and all the names of the shitty bands that are singing them.

It's going to be hilarious when they slap the fine on his ass, and then he normally comes back here and starts attacking people over it. ROFL, I can't wait.

Oh, you would be _amazed_! That's partly why I accumulated all the titles
(the other part being that it's fun). I took the nick on in 1990, and a decade or so later began adding on a bunch of titles, some of them given, others taken.

Over 3 million hits, but that's including adjectival uses.

Some 80 or so Yahoo ID/profiles with "snarky" in them, including mine, SnarkyC and popesnarky.

It isn't my option to give him the opportunity. He was disqualified meet the qualifications for standing for an ARRL Board election before he could be soundly defeated.

Do you ever have an original thought, UnWiseman? The purloined piece doesn't cut it.

Try something like:

Glen Dale police and Marshall County Sheriff's deputies surrounded the home of Glen Dale resident Roger L. Wiseman in a four hour standoff early this morning. Wiseman, who is mentally impaired, took himself hostage in the wee hours of the morning and threatened to take his own life unless he was released.

After Wiseman surrendered, there was a brief argument between Glen Dale police and the deputies. Both wanted to question Wiseman. After a heated discussion, Wiseman was taken into custody by Glen Dale police. Chief Norman Stenger said, "We'd like to talk to Mr. Wiseman about newsgroup postings where he talks about members of the Glen Dale police force.

Wiseman screamed something about "Lloyd and Dave and Chason" as he was handcuffed and placed into the police cruiser. An unnamed Sheriff's deputy said, "We want a crack at the little bastard after Glen Dale is through with him".

Yet, if the judge doesn't recuse him/herself where a conflict of interest occurs, or a potential conflict of interest exists, then what do you call it?

The jury pool contains a large number of potential jurors who remain in the pool, eligible for duty on numerous other trials.

People who are eliminated from the ballot never get that chance.

Then you advocate that the judicial system take away the ability of a Hardly. Its an important safeguard that is absolutely needed.

Working guys not from industry (and probably lacking in technical knowledge), and retired guys from industry (whose retirement plans and 401ks couldn't possibly present a conflict of interest).

what is realy amusing is that He does nt mind the fact that Robesin has claimed to have been somdoized by a man and if it is anot all right for me it should not be alright for Robeson

I don't like Homophobes but even worse than Homophobes are thoose the use gay bashing selctively for own ends. I can respect a homophobe that is consistant and honest about it but these hypocrites honestly I think so if he ever had to deal with own actions hed surely colapse under the weight

as I said last year that sure reads like a bad job of makigng something up

>
> > maybe Amy is just Steve in drag

well considering steve attitude by the standards he uses Amy is at least a a shemale or cross dresser after he denies that my wife can be female becuase of my sexual interests, and has conceeded to have the same sort of interests himself, and he has never posted a pic of Amy there for by the standards he uses to insist m wife is male his own wife must be (which obviously does not prelude her from just Robeson in drag)

now to make it clear I am not saying amy is male merely that Amy is likely to be male by Robeson own "logic" indeed much more so since Robeson could easily be trying to generalize from the expernce he claims to have had, and posible observation of his own situation to come to his "conclusion"

I took the code test (novice 5WPM) back in 73 in high school, and had the totally worthless (to me) Novice ticket for 2 years or whatever it was. I spent a lot of time practicing CW, back then and also about 10 years ago, and can't seem to get past 7-8WPM, so I gave up on it, the sound of it annoys me anyway. It wasn't worth the stress it caused me to work HF. of course, since I DID pass the 5WPM test, I can be a general now. But, the interest has passed. I have a 2M mobile and an HT, but if I buy an HF rig, it's going to be to listen, but not to other hams, that's as boring as it gets. If I want to hear about hip replacements, and stuff like that, I can visit the folks at the assisted living place my mom's in.

I don't care about HF anymore, the code requirement outlasted my interest in HF. I wanted to be on HF from the time I was a little kid to about age 40 or so. No longer. I have my other hobbies now, guns, PCs, home theater, and dogs. Not much time or budget left for ham radio.

Just because you and I were forced to learn it does it mean a new ham should. It's an obsolete mode in most respects, handy in a certain type of emergency, but of little other use, except communicating with other people using it. Nobody's stopping them. Nobody should have to learn it either.

But it's funny, the people I hear, both on HF and 2M and 440 causing all the real problems are people who didn't get a no code license, supposedly don't have a "CB mentality", yet do many of the things you can hear on 11 meters all the time, keying up on top of other hams, harassing hams, ignoring calls, etc, based on their call sign timeframe (Thinking if the ham was ticketed after xx-xx-1990 or whatever, they are a "hamster", etc). Seems like the code makes you this way, or maybe getting old does.

I would gladly take the "CB mentality" over the stuff the so-called "good hams" pull.

The God of Odd Statements
Stupidity Takes Its Toll. Please Have Exact Change.
Please remember to vote Outer Filth John Harrington, "James C. Cracked", and "Ward Hardmanure"/"Pete"/<wfh_jr> for KotM, CotM, CNotM, and the Special Ops Cody Memorial Award!
Thread where outing begins: http://tinyurl.com/hojf8
Also vote Ward Hardmanure for Order of the Holey Sockpuppet!
George Pickett Memorial Award nominee <wfh_jr@hotmail.com> on outing personal contact info in x-poasted subject lines:
"Plenty of people post under their real names and do not attempt to hide their contact info. You are scared of being 'outed' because you are a pathological abuser of usenet, and people rightly despise you for it. You're afraid of being reported to the authorities or, better, visited by a couple of guys with baseball bats. Other people don't have this obsessive fear. Ward Hardman himself has posted plenty of personal information - nothing that anyone else added was hidden in any way. You're so fucking scared you've built up this whole sick mythology about different categories of bad dudes who 'out' scum like you.

"Meanwhile you are the ugliest pigfucker in the universe. You are the coward without ethics. You call me a 'newbie' - ha! what an asshole you are. Those who want to remain anonymous do so. There is absolutely no way you could identify me, not unless you had the sort of subpoena power that only gets turned on for big-time terrorists. That's because I chose to be anonymous. Some people don't. Only really stupid dicks like you choose the sort of semi-anonymity which leaves you in constant fear.

:-) The pro-morseman club wants to hang together instead of hanging separately. Extras are united and condining the depravity expressed by other morsemen.

Robesin's idea of a no-code-test advocate takes the following forms ('nocoders' referring to no-code-test advocates):

1. Nocoders are Yiddish penises, stupid, ignorant, incapable of sex, thinking for themselves, or taking the Nobel-level amateur radio test.

2. All nocoders HATE ham radio since Robesin represents ALL of amateur radio and they do not bow down to his amateur "leadership."

3. All nocoders involved in Scouting are sexual perverts preying on boys. [or girls]

4. Nocoders that do not accept Robesin's bluffing and brags are unpatriotic perverts who hate the USA.

5. It is perfectly right and honorable to denigrate physical-mental deficiencies of others since Robesin is an expert in the medical field, any discipline of medicine. [he took a hypocritic oath, not the Hippocratic Oath]

5 A. Robesin has the "authority" to call other authorities to have anyone disagreeing with him "picked up" through a simple telephone call from him. Anyone disagreeing with him is cautioned that he "can do so"

at any time.

5 B. Anyone who took formal classes in any university and completed a post-graduate degree involving human psychology and treatment attended "correspondence school" by mail (example: University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana or University of Wisconsin at Madison) and cannot possibly know more than the Great One (Robesin).

6. If 9-year-olds can pass an Extra class amateur radio exam then all who do not bother taking such a test are stupid, ignorant, slothful, and are less able than a young child.

7. Anyone who demands third-party proof of Robesin's heroic military life is any or all of (1) to (5) above regardless of their proof presented in public.

8. Whatever Robesin says is equivalent to the Word of God and those who don't believe it get (1) through (7) above in response, followed by a blizzard of ugly personal insults in "reply."

There are considerably more (all archived in Google) and seem to also apply to other morsemen extras if they so much as imply the Great One (Robesin) is in error. What is remarkable is the near-total-absence of critique by his fellow morsemen, the condoning of his filthy statements, such morsemen attempting to blame nocoders for Robesin's own depravity. His fellow morsemen are afraid of Robesin? It must be so since at least one said she "could not control" Robesin. [her spanking ruler fell from her hand in fright]

Not a pretty picture of US amateur radio PARTICIPANTS presented to the public. [their PANTS were dropped] :-)

ALL radio operators are "appliance operators" as you so idiotically put it. A radio is a radio, no matter who turns the switch on. Does the range in your kitchen stop being a range if Martha Stewart operates it?

"Appliance Operator" is a term to distinguish from those who are able not only to turn on and operate their equipment, but also understand how it functions and can reproduce the circuitry therein. An appliance operator knows little or nothing about how the equipment they use works, only how to use it (not necessarily in a proper or legal manner).

The only time I've ever encountered you, I sat right next to you. I had words with you. I stared into your beady little eyes. There was no one between us. After the formal ARES meeting and a partial tour of the communications van, you fled, never to return.

> You

Do I? I've offered you a way to put that to the test. You've yet to respond with a time and place. Since you seem confident that I wouldn't show up, what do you have to lose?

That's completely and absolutely false. I never have and never will. Unlike you, I have no need to hide my identity. You, on the other hand, can't possibly post as yourself.

No one here lies more than you, UnWiseman. As for my being a windbag, my posts are generally quite short. I can't rival Len Anderson's output and I certainly can't match you for sheer volume of posts under your various guises.

Heck, Rog, you can't even admit to who and what you are.

[to Jimmy the M:]
What "radio industry" "conflicts with amateur radio," Mr.
Professional in the Transportation Industry?

Yaesu? Kenwood? Icom? JRC? Harris? :-)

Seems to me that the ARRL has featured lots of nice news squibs of radio industry folks GIVING equipment to ARRL and W1AW. [not too long ago Harris unloaded a bunch of TXs to W1AW]

How does WiFi "conflict" with ARRL interests? [Carl's main work right now...on WiFi and WiMax Standards]

Since Carl Stevenson is Executive Director of No Code International and the ARRL is against giving up any morse code test for radio amateur license applicants, I'd say that's a bona fide built-in CONFLICT of interest right there.

[wait for the SPIN from the League Believers...]

Right...their conflict of interest with NCI... :-)

WHAT is that "interference-from-BPL?"

Seems to me that Carl's work on WiFi was a lot more.

Wireless communications is allocated to different bands than amateur bands, operating well above 30 MHz where "the bands" exist for hams.

Funny!

On Friday I finished my 5th "tour of duty" as a jury member in the Superior Court of the County of Los Angeles. Surrounded by legal beagles of all types and hearing much barking in court, the word "recuse" was not spoken. "Excuse," yes, on the challenges of both prosecution and defense to jury panel members (each can have a particular juror excused without stating the full cause, up to 10 or 12 or whatever). A jury panel member can excuse themselves (and should, by law here)
if they are on friendly or social or otherwise involved with a defendant, an attorney, member of the court, etc.

Newspaper accounts have only lately featured "recuse" as a fancy word and lots of folks have picked up on it to show how much smarts they think they have. :-)

>> Take jury selection. Here in Pennsylvania, there are lots of >> occupations and associations that will get someone eliminated from >> different types of cases.

In L.A. Superior Court you CANNOT be a jury member if you are in law enforcement or several other occupations all spelled out in state LAW. There is no "excusing" there if one isn't even in the jury pool. :-)

<two paragraphs DELETED from J.M, LLd>

>> OTOH, a potential jury member cannot recuse themselves. They can give >> the jury commission reasons to not choose them, but ultimately it is >> not their decision.

Bullshit, sweetums. Not in this state which outnumbers
"EPA" (Eastern Pennsylvania, which NEEDS the other EPA) considerably. Selected jury panel members here MUST EXCUSE (not recuse) themselves if they find out they know a defendant or members of the court.

>> In a jury case, it is ultimately the jury who decide the outcome, just >> as in the ARRL BoD, it is the directors and vice directors who decide >> policy. Neither depends on self-disqualification (recusing) to prevent >> conflict of interest.

More bullshit from the self-proclaimed chief justice...

The ARRL is a PRIVATE ORGANIZATION. They are NOT bound tightly to some government agency laws and restrictions IN THE SAME WAY. If the ARRL wants to oust someone or keep them off the private organization's ballot they CAN and DO.

>The jury pool contains a large number of potential jurors who remain in >the pool, eligible for duty on numerous other trials.
>People who are eliminated from the ballot never get that chance.

TRUE. In the L.A. Superior Court all selected for the "jury pool" are referred to as jurors or jury members.
We are selected to go to a particular courtroom by a small random-chance tumbler machine holding our ID numbers (names are not used, Superior Court assigns individual ID numbers ahead of time). This forms what L.A. calls the "jury pool" and in each courtroom the court clerk selects ID numbers from a similar random-chance machine to be on a jury (here 12 regular plus 3 alternates). Only after the selection from the pool do jurors find out about a case. At that point the judge recites the law on jury members associations with the case which requires that affected jurors must excuse themselves, giving reasons to the court. The jury pool has to remain until prosecution and defense are finished with their challenges since, if jurors are excused, one from the pool takes their place.

All of that is for the criminal court. Civil court has a carbon copy of the LAW, only certain terms changing from criminal to civil cases.

Elections in a PRIVATE ORGANIZATION are NOWHERE NEAR having to obey that same, established long ago LAW!

Anyone trying to equate legal court actions to some private organization elections is way TOTALLY CONFUSED.

Jimmy is trying to equate apples and oranges and getting fruity there. He wants to make a DIRECT COMPARISON of the ARRL to some government judicial organization and that DOES NOT EQUATE!

Brian, in a way we DO know. Carl Stevenson is exec director of NCI. ARRL is still plugging for code testing. DIRECT CONFLICT OF INTEREST within the ARRL right there. There wasn't a snowball's chance in hell of Carl getting on an ARRL ballot.

I vote with you, Brian, the Good 'ol Boys of the BoD and offices within the ARRL want "company men" who think like they do. None of this brash upsetting of their traditional applecart.

One can research the TRUE facts of the conclave of wirepullers in the ARRL but it really isn't worth the time and trouble. The ARRL will deny any negative charges, however slight, and SPIN the hell out of it to make them all Knights in Shining Wonderwear. :-)

That's the final distillate, Brian. :-) Sort of the "kickapoo joy juice" that keeps US amateur radio retrograde to the days of H.P.M.

Does this mean that only a fully qualified journeyman auto technician really knows how to drive a car properly?

Does an executive chef at a 5 star restaurant need to know Ohms Law in order to cook properly on an electric stovetop? Does he also need to be a petro-chemist to operate a gas range?

The notion that only a person who knows the inner workings of a device can operate it properly is downright insulting and worthy of utter contempt.

Can you rebuild the transmission in your car in your back yard right now? If not then you are a bad driver, according to the "appliance Except Barwell only gets to define "worth showing up at church on Sunday for" for Barwell, not for the rest of humanity. Then again, even if I were actively religious, I'd be Pagan, so I wouldn't be showing up at church anyway, nor would I be worshipping on Sundays -- not particularly, anyway. I didn't /need/ to quote all of the above, but I feel it my civic duty to alert everyone to the madness of Willam Barwell.

The Cordell Press, Inc.
presents
Memoir of a Radio God
By Glenn A. Baxter, P.E.., K1MAN

Chapter 1
A "Star" is Born?
or Aren't We All "Stars?"
or
The Happiest Day of My Life

It was the happiest day of my life. It was also the scariest. I remember the day well.* I had won the "lottery." I became a brand new human baby. It was 5:42 A.M. on March 9, 1942. I was eager to get this new show on the road. I was all tangled up in the darn umbilical cord, but that didn't seem to bother me at all. I couldn't breath when I came out of my groggy mom. That DID bother me! I was blue. I was ugly. My ears were flapped over. The doctor struggled and got me untangled. They hustled my mother away as they frantically struggled to save my precious little life. All life is precious! It was touch and go for quite a while.

Meanwhile my Mom, Marion Watson Baxter, from Swan Quarter, North Carolina, was hustled out of the delivery room at St. Agnes Hospital in White Plains, New York.

"Where is my son," she demanded in her 'drunken' stooper?

She had been drugged pretty hard to make my arrival and complications as painless as possible.

"Oh, we are cleaning him up," a nurse replied.

My mom was a Registered Nurse (with almost no time yet as a practicing nurse).

"Oh don't be ridiculous" she slurred through the pain killing drugs!"

Back in the delivery room, I seemed to be OK. No brain damage, I speculate, just a few loose screws, as anyone who knows me will agree.

"Boy, that was close!" I thought as I cried up a storm.

Finally, after what seemed forever, the Irish nurse brought me in to see my mom. My mother acted as though she had just had a couple of Manhattans. What did I know?

When she first held me tenderly (I liked that) she cried and said:

"How will I ever learn to love him? He is so ugly!"

Now THAT is ugly! I thought:

"Hey mom, you ain't seen 'nothin' yet! I will nestle into your heart and be a joy unto your life! And a pain in the you know where! I 'got' plans!"

Mom fed me and then it was time to go out with the rest of the kids in that awful room. What a noise they all made.

"What a bunch of babies," I thought!

Then my dad came to the window. Another Irish nurse picked me up. She pointed to me, and then to him, and mouthed:

"He looks just like you!"

My dad grinned and gave her the "monkey sign." You know, he thumbed his nose. She was quite indignant and stamped her foot.

"Hey, I like this spunky lady," I thought, "Already I have people sticking up for me. And that guy, my dad, great sense of humor! Look at him. Dirty old man (he was 50)! He loves me already! I think I am going to like it around here!"

My dad died when I was 16. He was making love to my mom. He had just served her breakfast in bed, as was his usual routine. He had just told her that she had been the best wife he could possibly have. He said he didn't think he would ever get any closer to heaven than he was at that moment. It was a beautiful morning (August 31, 1958), only ten feet from the water on Great Pond in Belgrade Lakes, Maine. I was in the next room, sound asleep. My older sister Carol was in her bedroom sound asleep. My oldest sister Betty and her husband, George Sternad, and their kids, Shelley and Kenny, were in the Guest House, all sound asleep.

I was awakened when I heard George on the phone out in the living room:

"Hello Dr. Adams? This is George Sternad. Mr. Baxter died about fifteen minutes ago."

Remember the scene in the movie Dr. Chivago when Yuri watches as they start to throw dirt on his mother's coffin? That is exactly how I felt. KaBam! I slipped out the lake front screen door of my room and went out to the shop, a separate building. I needed to think. I needed to be alone for a few minutes. George came into the shop and put his hand on my shoulder. He said:

"You are the man of the family now." I Started to cry.

My mom was a basket case. Dr. Adams and his wife Frieda came over. They were neighbors. I had palled around with their Tom boy daughter Nancy and her best friend Ann (who I was in love with) for years. I thought the Adams' showing up like that was pretty classy. They all came over for dinner later that evening. My sister was to be off to Northwestern as a freshman, and I was to be off to Vermont Academy as a Junior. Things had settled down a bit as we all faced our lives ahead without Frank H. Baxter. He was a good man, a good father, a good husband, and he was my best friend. He pushed me fairly hard. I pushed back somewhat. I knew what was good for me, though. I needed to be pushed; I believe all kids need to be pushed. Carol, my older sister feels this was cruel. Not so! My dad gave us both plenty of "wiggle room," however. When he died, my mom became my best friend. When she died, my wife Bonnie became my best friend.

He took the whole summer off, starting when I was 9, and we worked on projects together. I would run around and get tools for him, and we had a ball. He loved me, and I loved him.

My first year at Vermont Academy started out as a disaster. I was an academic derelict. I was a scholastic "street person." I began to come alive the Spring of my freshman year, however. If I made honors in my sophomore year, my dad agreed to buy me a new $695 Collins 75A-4 amateur radio receiver. That was the Rolls Royce of radios, and in 1958, $695 was a lot of money. I missed honors, but not by all that much.

Was I spoiled? Yes. Was I lucky? Yes! Am I dysfunctional? Yes! One time I went to a shrink. He, then, had to go to a shrink. I was sent BOTH bills! Life can be so unfair! Am I crazy? No!

Ask any one of my teachers. They will tell you! Ask any one of my employers. Ask my angel and loving wife Bonnie. Ask Walter Cronkite, the most trusted American. He knows me well. They will all tell you the same thing. Glenn Baxter is a piece of work. I suspect that all of us are a piece of work, only I freely admit it! I have some great friends and some bitter (and very powerful) enemies. I am trying to love my enemies. I hereby forgive them all for any nasty things they may have done. I wish to be forgiven for the nasty things I have done. I am truly sorry.

Every human being (even dogs and cats) are products of their genes and their environments. Being loved and wanted makes a big difference. All things make a big difference.

For example. My dad feels romantic on 9 June 1941 (nine months before I was born). Pearl Harbor has not happened yet. My mom is agreeable to some romance. Maybe it was her idea. No, it probably WAS her idea. OK. All set to go. Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, is about to get his big chance. BUT! The phone rings. Wrong number. Glenn Baxter doesn't happen. K1MAN get assigned to someone else! His brother or sister get to be the next and last child in the Frank and Marion Baxter family, not even a ham!. Chance. Roll of the dice. Dr. Albert Einstein (my middle name is Albert, after Dr. Einstein) says that God doesn't play with dice. I disagree. One wrong number, and I would not be here. 14.275, 3.890, and 3.975 would be the same old stuff on amateur radio. No "illegal"(1) broadcasting, etc., etc.

Think about yourself. Suppose it was the sperm right next to you and not your sperm. Would it be YOU here reading this? No. At best, it would be your sister or brother. You would not exist. You would never exist. You had one chance and only one chance AND you made it.

Think about it like this. 111,000 thousand fans in Michigan stadium, "The Big House." One thin dime dropped out of a plane at 40,000 feet lands in the stadium the night before the big game. Who finds the dime? It was you, lucky you!

Whenever I see a new baby at the super market or somewhere else, I usually lean down and say:

"Well, how do you like life so far?

The mom usually says something like:

"Well he (or she) likes it just fine!"

Life is really precious, from the smallest spider (or even smaller) to the largest whale.

The bible says

"I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day that I have given you a choice; life or death. The blessing or the curse. Therefore choose life, so thou mayest LIVE, thou and thy seed."

I chose life. It was scary. It still is scary.

Choosing life, without hesitation, I decided that it was time to get on with it. I was on my way to becoming a "star," at least for a few brief moments. Every dog has his day, and I was destined to have mine.

"Now, how do I try and charm Carol, my youngest sister? My oldest sister is away at college; she will be putty in my tiny hands. But Carol? She might not like having competition over there at 31 Claremont Road, Scarsdale, New York. I think I will just play 'dumb' and try the good old 'just be a happy baby' approach. That might, just might, work."

Every day is the happiest day of my life.

* Actually I don't remember anything at all. This account is how I know I would have been thinking and assuming I could think at all at that time. My brain cells were all there, and some of the standard "programming" was working quite well, but it was like a new house with all the wiring in place but no "connections" made yet. The lights were on, but nobody was home, so to speak. I do know that I was loved.

 Actually, I didn't have a clue what I was doing. I was on "auto pilot" and was just going along with the flow. But I was loved, and you could take that to the bank.

(1) There are many Radio Amateurs in the United States and abroad who are of the totally wrong opinion that my daily call-in Amateur Radio Talk program, heard world wide on the short wave frequencies of 3.890 MHz., 3.975 MHz., and 14.275 MHz., 365 days per year since 1987, through July 4, 2005 was "illegal." It was the only short wave radio program of its kind and has never been attempted before or again by anyone.

Huh? Roger, a "romantic"? Oh, I suppose he probably does feel a bit amorous while fantasizing about all the Dirty Deeds he'd like to perform on young men, but he is much too meek to leave his house.
After all, why leave his Glen Dale mansion when he can instead log on to oodles of LAMBDA sites while never having to answer his door or venture outside?

Results 1 - 100 of about 72,600 for kadaitcha man. (0.18 seconds)

http://www.google.com/search?client=opera&rls=en&q=kadaitcha+man&sourceid=opera&num=100&ie=utf-8&oe=utf-8

For some reason, adding "[definition]" to the search string gave only 2,440 results.

Anyway. Which deity?

"Appliance Operator" is a term to distinguish from those who are able not only to turn on and operate their equipment, but also understand how it functions and can reproduce the circuitry therein. An appliance operator knows little or nothing about how the equipment they use works, only how to use it (not necessarily in a proper or legal manner).

Would you have 1000 people learn to drive a standard transmission even though only one person out of those 1000 people benefits from it? The cost/benefit ratio is extremely high.

(I'll go ya one better - make EVERYBODY drive a standard - or a Harley - and save some oil. Outlaw automatics!)

Ok then - same goes for satellite communications, fast/slow scan television, packet, EME, and so on. Lots of applicants will never use those modes, but the questions are on the test, so you better learn the material.

K2FRD (I think) proposed what I thought was the best solution to the Morse code issue - keep it as part of the test, but don't keep it as a show-stopper. I think it would be fair, at least for the higher grade licenses, to throw it in there with all the other modes you may never use.... have it on the test, let the applicant earn some points from it if they can, but don't send 'em home disappointed if they don't.

Someone skilled in driving a vehicle with a manual transmission and actually using it can reap a number of performance benefits. These include improved gas mileage, better passing performance, better performance in hilly terrain, etc. If people were required to learn how to drive vehicles with manual transmissions, more of them might actually choose to drive such vehicles.

Always showing their rears to the world.

Robesin has been showing his for years, and not a word from the Extras.
Then Mark out-assholes Robesin, and they complain about Mark.

And I misinterpret their intentions. Hi!

I'll bet his weekend was shifted to include 9/11 in place of Saturday, just in case some of his fellow work / release inmates might cause trouble tomorrow.

That might be pretty close to the mark.

Now prepare for the male genitalia, homosexual inuendo, claims of pedophilia, and the consumption of excrement remarks from Robesin, while Dave and Jim stand by silently endorsing such behavior.

His Extra peer group on RRAP have never expressed a discouraging word about his on-line activities.

I have no idea what goes on in the Robesin household, but whateever it is, I really don't want to know. Maybe one day they'll be on Springer... and I won't be watching.

Summary of Len's comments:

Len is still suspicious of the ARRL. Len believes Carl should have been allowed to run. Len believes that Carl would have brought change, even if he would have been one of many ARRL Directors if elected.

Len is still not a radio amateur and not an ARRL member. Len is not a participant in amateur radio and his views of what is best for amateur radio and what is best for the ARRL are still irrelevant.

Absolutely not. It doesn't matter if they want to ride a bicycle or not. Simply knowing how to ride a bicycle would be good for them. And if they discovered they liked it enough to actually ride a bicycle, it would not only benefit them but also benefit the environment.

Perhaps Carl would have championed the reciprocol frequency rule. You can't talk to people on frequencies where they're not allowed. You can't be the other half of an illegal QSO.

By your logic, Brian Burke is afraid of you and of Mark Morgan. He is unable or unwilling to control either of you. BAD Brian. He converses with Mark as if Mark's behavior in the newsgroup was absolutely normal and he acts as red-hatted monkey for your old organ grinder routine.

How does "silent endorsement" work out in practice?

You haven't noticed his tender side? Roger expresses his sexual feelings quite eloquently. In fact, I understand that he is absent today because he is attending a poetry reading. He reserves most Saturdays for a sensitivity session. Roger has even offered to run some errands for a local ham who is wheelchair-bound.

Yessir, we're seeing a new Roger Wiseman--suave, erudite, urbane.

It wouldn't surprise me to see Roger volunteering at church, putting in some hours participating in the activities of the local Rotary Club, becoming active in the affairs of the Marshall County ARES group or donating his time to Meals On Wheels.

"Reciprocal"

Is that the one where one party is responsible for looking up the frequency allocations for each foreign QSO, determining the other operators license class and the like? Does it include checking the FCC database to ensure that the other op in each domestic QSO has a right to be where he is operating?

I'm sure that a highly competent guy like Carl Stevenson would have no problem running that by what he calls, "

Carl would be aided in his efforts by the warmth and comraderie he has genererated with statements like:

"The ARRL is like a corrupt dictatorship ... out of control and yet with all the power of control (and money from its publishing empire)
... the only viable way to save ham radio is to overthrow the ARRL and kick them out as the "representative" of ham radio to the FCC ... given a chance, they'll do the wrong thing practically every time, it seems."

"Almost anything would be better ... they're WORSE THAN NOTHING because they do the wrong, destructive thing more often than not."

"Actually I am, but I have no aspirations to become the next Dave Sumner ...that would be a big step backward for me career-wise."

"The BOD climbed into bed with a bunch of long-time frequency coordination egomaniacs and to hell with everyone else."

"Get screwed, Herman .. the ARRL is NOT "the savior" ... they're Nero fiddling merrily while Rome burns all around them."

"...I have so little faith in the ARRL's ability to lead ham radio into the next century that I beleive almost anyone could do a better job".

"I don't see the ARRL as being 'effective' AT ALL ... I see it as being/having been the single largest impediment to the modernization, growth, and future security of the Amateur Radio Service."

Those are just a few of Carl's gems. There are many, many more.

Poor Davie. No one respects or admires your championship name-calling over distance. Here's a suggestion: Bus over some of Mother Superior's "friends and neighbors" so that they can "admire your work." Demonstrate high-rate morse all over the world, explain to them it is absolutely essential to work DX on HF with CW, fight terrorists and invading space aliens, and reduces underarm odor.

Tsk, tsk, tsk. I did NOT post a digitized photograph of a converted B-26 water-dropping aircraft over a forest area in public. That was Robesin on his very short-lived libelous AOL home page. :-) AOL deleted Robesin's "Never trust lennie" page once they were notified.

That photo was very funny to thousands of folks, perhaps tens of thousands. What did YOU see in it that horrified you, Herr Robust? Were your sensibilities upset? Do you even HAVE sensitibilities? "The world wonders."

You should work on your morse goad some more. People skills you ain't got. Tsk, and all those Department of State years and you never learning any diplomacy skills paid for by the US taxpayer...

We don't see that. :-) That's the point you cannot comprehend.

Tsk, tsk. Robesin has flooded this newsgroup with thousands and thousands of postings of drivel, lies, accusations, and personal insults before Mark entered this Din of Inequity the first time and after Mark's absence. Mindless, incorrect drivel, fraudulent claims of alleged military service, and lies, insults, libel levelled against ANYONE who disagreed with him. See Google archives.

Ah, but Robesin is a fellow morse bigot extra. Such are ALLOWED to do as you do. All morse bigot extras stick together like the crazy glue they have inside. Tsk. NOT a pretty picture of amateur radio "participation" you seem to think is so noble.

Don't forget Robesin's "threats" to contact our wives.
Or his attempts at being "another" poster (anonymous, of course) to misdirect our time. :-)

I'd say that Herr Robust and Mother Superior secretly WANT to say what Major Dud does but are afraid to do the same. Herr Robust seems ready to break out and reveal his REAL hate, though, he thinks he's a PARTICIPANT. :-)

Okay, let's all hear it for the ARRL as part and parcel of the US Judicial System (as the Believers intone here)!
ARRL and morsemanship are noble, good, and true, can

Cecil, bicycles (and most motorcycles) need smooth roadways; it is hard to operate "CW" while mobile and off-road on a bike.

Now HORSEBACK mobile is the same on-road or off-road. No gasoline or oil needed nor "gear shifting." Horses can make "new models" all by themselves, keep themselves
"powered up" without the aid of stations like Exxon, 76, Shell, or Sinclair. The US Army even had a 'horse mobile' radio set (1943) to talk while the troop was on the move. :-)

Everybody ought to learn to "sit" a horse and guide it. :-)

Dee seems to have little experience in long-haul driving, or even short-haul automotive transport. I learned to drive in a '39 Ford sedan. The first three autos I owned were manual trans, a Plymouth two-door (came out west in it), a '53 Austin-Healey roadster (manual trans went kaput while downshifting on a freeway off-ramp back in '60), and a Brit very compact station wagon. A whole lotta NONSENSE to do the clutch-gearshift thing on all those manual transmission vehicles even if it was easy for me. NO "performance increase" whatsoever of manual versus automatic.

Buying a new 2005 Chevy Malibu MAXX with its better engine system computer allowed us to get 32.7 MPG (based on both fuel tank filling receipts AND the Driver Information Center display of MPG) for a 1,900 mile round trip up to Washington state and back in July this year. That's without using the Cruise Control (which my wife likes but I don't, driving over 90% of the time). About 2 1/2 MPG better than the Chevy Cavalier wagon for the same distance the year before. MAXX had done almost as good MPG in September last year on a much longer distance to Wisconsin, again doing about 2 1/2 MPG better than the Cavalier over the same route the year before that.

The engine computers keep getting better and better, some even compensating for the bad habits of some drivers using the almost-universal automatic. Why anyone would prefer using a manual or automatic in stop-and-go city traffic can be summed up as RATIONALIZATION or braggadoccio by manual trans owners. Besides, operating "CW" in stop-and-go city traffic will seriously cut down one's morsemanship speed with a manual trans. Unless one has a third hand... :-)

Cell phone coverage is growing, growing, growing. My wife used the cell for all kinds of calls while we were moving in MAXX through several states, even checking her e-mail on AOL! Without any skill at morsemanship whatsoever, she "worked" her sister in WA state from the parking lot of a restaurant in Amana, IA, using the cell phone. :-) Hmmmm. One out of three Americans has a cell phone now. Yet, Blowcode contends "everyone has to learn" morsemanship to have a backup skill in comms? :-)

Well said. Barwell's comment reveals his prejudice. He purports to be dealing with the idea of 'any possible god' but his mind is tied up in the god one shows up to worship on Sunday. Barwell's only real experience is completely wrapped up in the god of Christian Dogma. He really knows nothing about religion beyond his own experience and what he can dredge up on google.

When he shows up with his derivative pseudo arguments, those arguments only have application to Barwell's skewed idea of what god can be, and that idea is completely wrapped up in his personal view of orthodox Christianity. So of course Barwell writes everything else off as unimportant. Somewhere in his head, he's come to conflate what Barwell thinks is important with what's metaphysically possible. That's the only way we get from "I can disprove the existence of all gods" to the vastly fallacious implication that "these gods don't exist BECAUSE they aren't important."

You are absolutely right! Why didn't I think of that? One caveat, however - they'll also have to pass a Morse code test with their bicycle horn. (I forget now - is this so they can drive a car or use the microwave oven?) This is too silly.

The only way any government agency gets employees is to pay them, Len. I've explained diplomacy to you twice in recent weeks. Here it is for the third time: Sometimes there is the carrot and the stick. Sometimes there is just the carrot. Sometimes there is just the stick. Write it down somewhere.

the US government with their "free elections?" :-)

>>>Len believes Carl should have been allowed to run.

considered for getting on any ARRL ballot. :-)

Can't you get ANYTHING right?

>>>Len believes that Carl would have brought change, even

You still did NOT get anything right.

NOBODY new can change the "minds" of the ARRL good 'ol bouys club. They are afloat in a sea of retrograde.

Membership in the ARRL is still a minority of all licensed US radio amateurs. It never reached a quarter of all of them, yet the ARRL does its PR BS about "representing" ALL of [US] amateur radio.

>>>Len is still not a radio amateur and not an ARRL member.

No and yes. I have a hobby of electronics homebrewing which sometimes includes radio. Since that activity is paid for solely by myself, it is considered "amateur."

I am a professional in electronics engineering, have long held a Commercial radio operator license, and am a Life

Oh, wow, did Herr Robust get THAT bs WRONG!

Poor baby, let me repeat: I am an advocate of eliminating the morse code TEST for US radio amateurs. That is it.

I could not possibly hope to tell Herr Heil "what to do!"
:-) Herr Heil KNOWS ALL and doesn't hesitate to slam

ARRL is a virtual monopoly on United States amateur radio publications. Having that means they can influence all of their readership to ARRL viewpoints. They can brainwash opinions very easily...and have appeared to do just that.

As a private organization they are NOT bound to rules and regulations that apply to REAL government...yet they pretend to be a "representative" of ALL US radio amateurs.

Tsk, ARRL still hasn't achieved a membership as large as a quarter of all US amateur radio licensees. Yet.

>"Almost anything would be better ... they're WORSE THAN NOTHING because >they do the wrong, destructive thing more often than not."

NOT a "company man" attitude. Carl was already to be excluded from the coterie of coders that makes up the conclave of wirepullers in the ARRL.

>"Get screwed, Herman .. the ARRL is NOT "the savior" ... they're Nero >fiddling merrily while Rome burns all around them."

More non-company-man statements...even if an accurate quote.

['Herman' is a morse zealot-bigot in Hawaii who is a junior college math instructor but bills himself as a "mathematics LECTURER." :-)]

BELIEVERS in the Church of St. Hiram cannot accept the statements of non-believers even if they are TRUE.

>"...I have so little faith in the ARRL's ability to >lead ham radio into the next century that I beleive almost anyone could >do a better job".

True enough. ARRL membership hasn't grown past the under-one-quarter of all licensed US radio amateurs.

>"I don't see the ARRL as being 'effective' AT ALL ... I see it as >being/having been the single largest impediment to the >modernization, growth, and future security of the Amateur Radio Service."

True enough. ARRL membership hasn't grown past the under-one-quarter of all licensed US radio amateurs.

>Those are just a few of Carl's gems. There are many, many more.

And Google is full of Herr Heil's own personal insults levelled at any "heretic" not worshiping at the Church of St. Hiram. Heil is BELIEVER and may want to be a deacon when he should be a beacon.

Tsk, Davie's derring-do on behalf of the Church elders has turned out to be herring doo-doo. Yuck.

Poor guy can't realize that is NOT a good attitude to get others INTO US amateur radio. He is a RULER.

"A house is a house is a HOME"?

A house is just a building.

Well, for one, there was a developer who was willing to take on developing a piece of vacant land.

But the point is that a lot of changes have occurred in the real-estate and construction industries in 40+ years. New technologies - new methods - new financial and tax environments.

People also live differently. There are more blended families, more divorced people, more two-career-with children families, etc.

More diversity, IOW.

But you wanted to keep your neighborhood stuck in the past, with the "little boxes on the hillside'...

Oh no! APARTMENTS! What a horror!

Did they mean high-rises? Low rises?

Or did they mean homes with apartments attached, as for relatives (sometimes called "mother-in-law suites"?

Here's a clue, Len: An apartment can be a home, same as a 'house' can be a home.

The point is you opposed the change.

And you thought those who were already in the neighborhood should overrule those who were trying to "get into" the neighhborhood.

IOW, he went through the hazing ritual of meeting your concept of the neighborhood. More little boxes on the hillside....

Right - you kept the status quo. They had to do it the way you did it - single family detached homes on a particular size of lot (1/3 to 1/4 acre). No twins, no duplexes, no triplexes, no townhomes, and most of all no (shudder) APARTMENTS!

How is that any different from those of us in amateur radio and who participate in it. who understand that a some regulations should change as little as possible?

No, very accurate. "Your Way" was single-family-detached residences. No twins, no duplexes, no triplexes, no townhomes, and most of all, no APARTMENTS.

> The

How many others did not oppose the zoning changes?

What about the people who wanted to live in the residences the first developer wanted to build? What did they want? Did anyone ask them?

> Oh, and there are dozens of basic house plans
> in several hundred acres of "my" neighborhood and only 2

But they're all basically the same - single-family-detached residences of a certain age, size and construction.

Why should radio amateurs not oppose the changes an outsider like you wants to force on us, when you opposed the changes an outsider tried to force on your neighborhood?

The amateur bands are a sort of home to us, not you.

Even if spelled correctly [you're, not your] Fred is definitely NOT saying his thing with civility. :-)

Freddie, Mark was saying that - IN THE BEGINNING - ALL radio services used morse code...and the first US radio regulating agency wanted all to show competency in this common mode so that the agency to communicate with all users. That era has long since passed into oblivion. Just ain't no other radio services using manual morse code for communications now.

I can't comprehend it? Hell, I wrote it. Meanwhile, we can observe Mark's mindless posts run into the thousands. He does hundreds in a month. You yourself have posted errors, outright lies, accusations and personal insults for better than a decade.

I'd certainly like to read that sphincter post of yours again--the one where you describe what it is like to go through and artillery barrage.
Did that actually happen to you or did you make it up? Your errors in the matter of amateur radio history--were those deliberate or just incorrect drivel? Your false statements about my State Department employment and my military service--do those fall under "lies",
"fraudulent claims", "incorrect drivel" or were they "libel leveled (not levelled) against someone who disagreed with you? See Google archives. By the way, your statement doesn't express a complete thought. It isn't a sentence. Didn't you claim to be a PROFESSIONAL writer of some sort?

Noble? I've never expressed the idea that amateur radio participation is

How many radio amateurs are enforcement problems because of their youth, Len?

I don't think you can give any examples, yet you wanted to prevent anyone under the age of 14 years from getting an amateur radio license.

I am, Len.

You can't name even one case where the "maturity" of a young radio amateur was an issue in an FCC enforcement action. But you want to keep young people out of amateur radio anyway.

> Here it is again as a

Even 6 year olds and 9 year olds know to speak with "inside voices", Len. Shouting does not get them what they want. It's immature behavior.

All ancient history, Len. Why do you live in the past?

based on your behavior here, you're not, Len.

Perhaps you have regressed since those ancient events you cite. It happens, y'know.

All it takes is for someone to disagree with you on the Morse Code test issue, and you behave in a very immature way.

Perhaps you need a time-out.

Hey Stupid,

I got N9OGL's Omega One pirate station at S-4 and can hear every shitty song Todd is playing with no effort at all, even with the attenuator in.
Excessive power is a violation of the rule.

N9OGL's due process is the full body cavity search they'll give him just before they throw him in the prison with AB8MQ if he don't pay the NAL

Mark shouldn't be too disappointed, Todd emailed him a picture of his

Not all of those statements are always true. As fond as I am of manual transmissions, sometimes automatics have the advantage. A hydraulic torque converter with a manually controlled "automatic" transmission is better at drag racing than a manual gearbox under many conditions.

This is less true under road race conditions where the lower torque needed to be handled by the transmission allows the newer style "manual" transmissions to change gears in milliseconds. The secret is 2 transmissions, one for the odd gears, one for the even, and 2 clutches, you are literally in 2 gears at the same time for a short period of time. Takes a lot of computer control. That's one way to do it, there are others.

The landscape is very blurred nowadays concerning what is a manual and what is an automatic transmission, with "manuals" in modern race cars being more automatic than "automatics" in non-race cars.

And the state of CW vs digital is about the same. Except CW can always be beat if your PC works. You just need to select the correct mode.

He may be on to something.

There is a reason that the ARRL membership numbers are so abysmal even though they are the only national amateur radio organization of any consequence.

That last statement is a fallacy. The digital modes are wiped out by conditions that will still permit CW to be used. Even SSB can sometimes be used when conditions wipe out the digital. I have repeatedly said and now I am emphasizing: EVERY MODE HAS ITS UNIQUE ADVANTAGES AND UNIQUE DISADVANTAGES. It seems that people wish to deny that whatever mode they don't want to deal with has any advantages whatsoever. They also wish to attribute magic properties to whatever is their favorite mode. Both points of view are foolish.

Yeah the same reason that 75% of the people I know don't belong to Wrong. There are digital modes that handle every distortion type that exists. You just have to pick the correct one.

CW is wiped out by conditions that will still permit PACTOR II to be used, e.g. I cannot hear any signals at all on an apparently dead band and a friend in Germany pops up on the screen.

Name them. I've not found any one mode that can handle all conditions of distortion. However, I have found from time to time that distortion can be severe enough at times to wipe out all digital modes even if you try to switch from mode to mode. Occasionally it can wipe out CW.

I repeat: EVERY MODE HAS ITS ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES. To deny that is foolish.

Ok--I solved the problem with the radio!

Yes, it had been modified. Someone grounded pin 10 of the PPL chip and fiddled with the VCO for above-band operation. I removed the jumper on pin 10 and then used a frequency counter to realign the VCO. Also, the output power was a bit high, so I adjusted the modulation circuit to make it operate at the legal limits for AM and SSB.

Thanks for the advice. It was helpful.

Everyone keeps ignoring that I maintain that: EVERY MODE HAS ITS ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES. I keep repeating this but no one cares to acknowledge such a plain and simple fact. Why is that? Are you all so set on bashing what you don't like? Are you all so set on trying to prove that your favorite mode, whatever it may be, is the best?

Unless Pactor II has recently been put into the public domain, it requires buying proprietary hardware to run it instead of using a simple inexpensive sound card interface with commonly available software. Most hams are not thrilled with the idea of proprietary hardware and data modes.

"Pretty much" is not the same as "always". You are hedging your statement.

What's a "PPL chip?" A popcorn popping loop? Why do I get the feeling that you're just blowing smoke in an attempt to impress someone?

Also, modifying the freqency or power determining circuits of such type-accepted equipment automatically makes it illegal to use on CB.
Way to go.

You must be a relative of mine. I love getting in the FCC's face, because they're afraid of me. Crank your power up to 100 watts, move to 22 meters, and blast away. Nobody will touch you because I said so.

Tsk. "Radio regulations" are changed in a democratic process where someone petitions the FCC, the FCC then publishes a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking on it and gives ALL CITIZNS the chance to Comment on it. The FCC then does some review and analysis of all Comments and decides. That is HARDLY a "whim," sweetums. Everyone interested can Petition their government but that doesn't set well with you ham homies, does it?
You are on some self-imposed Character Assassin on a Mission and MUST have your way! [you can't kill but you hope to talk everyone to death? :-)]

In the 1980s, sweetums, NOT in the 1960s or 1970s. You are OFF by 20 years and more.

>But the point is that a lot of changes have occurred in the real-estate >and construction industries in 40+ years. New technologies - new

Tsk. I'm acquainted with most of those...IN THIS AREA.
You are NOT. You MIGHT pull out a "Ramsey and Sleeper" ('Architectural Graphic Standards', Wiley) and crib from that (you can find them in used book stores now fairly cheap) but you would be, as usual, behind times. I have up-to-date Codes on Los Angeles buildings, electrical, plumbing and can get Expert information on "tax environments" and "financial environments" from two different neighbors...plus a couple of realtors I know and three long-time building equipment suppliers as well.
Can you say the same? NO. NOT in this area.

>People also live differently. There are more blended families, more >divorced people, more two-career-with children families, etc.

WTF? Have you been raiding the pop culture magazines at your corner newsstand?

>More diversity, IOW.

Los Angeles has been DIVERSE for a long, long time. I could go into a long list of various ethnic groupings here but that would only anger you some more. :-)

>But you wanted to keep your neighborhood stuck in the past, with the >"little boxes on the hillside'...

We weren't "stuck in the past," Jimmie. We LIVE here.
The hillsides go up and down roughly 900 feet in elevation and the "boxes" average about 21,000 square feet floorspace. My back yard is 820 feet MSL (that's a term from aviation referring to <above> Mean Sea Level), and quite unlikely to be flooded. :-) The area ground is mostly decomposed granite and quite stable.

>Sure - 40 years ago, Does that mean the zoning should never ever >change?

Zoning should NOT change on a whim. LIVING, in a home isn't subject to radio regulations. Humans have had homes for thousands of years. Radio is only 110 years old, early radio hardly comparable to modern radio; it has changed many times in that short span.

Try reading up on Real Property, the concept and the laws governing it over the known thousands of years of humans having homes.

>Or did they mean homes with apartments attached, as for relatives >(sometimes called "mother-in-law suites"?

Last I looked, mothers in law ARE FAMILY. Do YOU have a mother in law, Jimmy? Mine have passed on.

>Here's a clue, Len: An apartment can be a home, same as a 'house' can >be a home.

Here's a BIGGER "clue," Jimmy: This thread is about "using
'CW' in an emergency" not your constant bringing-up of old Character Assassination charges. Besides, I mentioned ZONING ordinances, not your small-caliber assassination ammunition.

>> That owner

Tsk, your argument is over minutae. I didn't do an Exact Head Count sweetums. Neither am I going to trot out old paperwork just to refute some kind of weird "charges" you bring up. The meetings had OVER a hundred people based on filling the two meeting places, both having a maximum-occupancy fire marshall's sign. :-)

Pay attention to what you quoted from me later on...there's a number there...but you didn't comment on that.

>The point is you opposed the change.
>And you thought those who were already in the neighborhood should >overrule those who were trying to "get into" the neighhborhood.

Ah, your "point" is clear. :-) You are trying to make an analogy to amateur radio regulations and the arguments over retention/elimination of the morse code test.

Okay, so you must LIVE in "the bands" with your little Elecraft. My neighbors and I live in HOMES HERE, not really concerning themselves with radiotelegraphy.

Not only have you mixed metaphors but you have mixed your fruit cocktail of "analogies" very, very badly.

>IOW, he went through the hazing ritual of meeting your concept of the >neighborhood. More little boxes on the hillside....

"Hazing ritual?" :-) It is common practice for a developer in an established neighborhood to meet with those already in the neighborhood and associations of that neighborhood. Here's how it works:

(1) The developer does planning and submits that to the city agencies for approval.

(2) It is NOT necessary by law to have the developer meet with an established neighborhood, but is a good PR move and avoids problems later on.

(3) Established neighborhoods really have NO say in the type/kind of dwellings approved by the city.
We could take that to our city councilmembers if there was a reason to "change" things.

>> That

Ah, we should be SHEEP accepting everything? :-) You don't understand the scope of operations on 15 acres adjacent to one's back yard, do you? Want to listen to at least a dozen OHSA back-up beepers from 7 AM to late afternoon? Of course you do, must be like morse code on "the bands." :-)

"Status quo?" From undeveloped property being a part of nature to developed houses with streets, hillside irrigation and landscaping. Damndest definition of "status quo" I've seen in years! :-)

Most of the new 44 lots were on quarter-acre plots, had to be two-story all of them. Pricing was "above $400K" and ALL were sold before construction, landscaping was finished.

>No twins, no duplexes, no triplexes, no townhomes, and most of

"Townhomes?" Hardly any of those outside of Center City in Los Angeles, Jimmy. Townhomes are for the old, old structures back east, like in Philly. :-)

Oh, dear, you are REALLY stuck in comparing lettuce with lava, aren't you? :-)

Earth to Jimmy: Come in, Jimmy, you are drifting too far into deep space with your analogy vessel. You are starting to resemble "Brewster Rockit, space guy" in the comic strips.

Yawn, there is MORE of Jimmy's exercise in assassination futility.

Those weren't polled, Jimmy. L.A. has a few million in population. I suppose somewhere, someone would be "opposed" to just about anything, but they all seemed to be OUT of our city council district and never present at the neighborhood meetings.

>What about the people who wanted to live in the residences the first >developer wanted to build? What did they want? Did anyone ask them?

The city of Los Angeles has a practice of mailing and/or handing out notices of new construction adjacent to residence areas, utility repairs and changes, and just about everything involving residential areas. As far as that goes, it would be safe to say that ALL were "asked." If some don't want to reply, well, that is their business. It sure as hell isn't YOUR business to act all huffy and whacko about a residential are in another state at least 2000 miles away from you. :-)

BWAAAHAHAHAHAHA!!!! In your twister logic an H3 is "the same" as a Mini Cooper...both have four wheels on the ground, have steel construction, have seats inside, are painted on the outside. "Basically the same?" You are nuts. Have a nice dance on your twister pattern.

>Why should radio amateurs not oppose the changes an outsider like you >wants to force on us, when you opposed the changes an outsider tried to

>The amateur bands are a sort of home to us, not you.

Jimmy boy, get a grip on reality. The FCC makes the regulations that all ham homies have to obey. ALL. "The bands" can change at any time on lawful order of the FCC. The FCC is NOT INVOLVED in residential zoning, dwelling construction, or even utility services to communities (except for incidental RFI from power lines, and certain things about wireline telephone and TV service).

The FCC is bound by law to listen to ALL interested citizens on ALL radio and wireline and interstate communications services. That includes the mobile radio "trailer park" you describe "the bands" to be. If there is a nearby (not IN my neighborhood) radio amateur causing RFI to me or my neighbors we have EVERY right to complain to the FCC about that amateur.
If you don't like the EM spectrum where "you live" you have every right to move to another allocated band. You have that OPTION. But you are restricted BY LAW to the little homie ham bands. I can go live anywhere I want (very few restrictions), house, apartment, mobile home, a different city, a different state. Freely.

Can't do the same with a residence building. It stays fixed and so do the utilities and the real estate taxes while we really LIVE in our homes. We can't "turn off" anything adjacent to a residence if we don't like it, not like you can with your little radio. Most of us neighbors

don't LIVE in our radios or TVs, Jimmy. Just about ALL of us. There's some here who HAVE radios and computers and cell phones (1 in 3 Americans have cell phones) but most of us don't "LIVE" in them. "Max Headroom" "lived" in a computer-TV but he wasn't real. Are you REAL, Jimmy, or just a wigment of your own imagination?

I bought my home-house-dwelling-livingplace in 1963, $30,500 for building and land, 6 1/4% mortgage. In today's market-place I could get $600K (give or take) on it and move elsewhere, still save money. [I like it HERE] Can you do that with your "radio home," Jimmy? Remember, amateur radio is "without pecuniary interest!" :-)

Will I see you at the next Los Angeles City meeting concerned with dwellings, residences, etc.? Why not? Could it be that you are not only a NON-PARTICIPANT in being a Los Angeles resident? Or maybe its because all you really wanted to do is attempt Character Assassination in a newsgroup? You failed at that, too, Jimmy. Bye-eee.

Tsk, tsk, Heil does NOT control or define "credibility."
He is NOT a "participant" in credibility. :-)

>I'm an active participant in amateur radio. You are irrelevant to >amateur radio.

(1) The FCC regulates US amateur radio, NOT its "participants." Lose the "boyz in da hood" attitude...it is not relevant.

(2) The FCC will (it must, by law) accept input on any regulations under Title 47 C.F.R. from ANY CITIZEN.
There is NO "requirement" that anyone "must be licensed" or be "an active participant" in US amateur radio.

(3) The issue of morse code testing of amateur radio license applicants affects those WHO MIGHT WANT TO GET INTO AMATEUR RADIO. Already-tested extras are NOT INVOLVED in GETTING INTO amateur radio; they are already "in" it.

Have you understood these truisms as they've been explained to you? If so, feel free to re-stick your carrot, Wallace.
Go mind your business at "Anti-Pesto."

Poor baby. Can't dig the sarcasm and ridicule? Closed minds can't accept any other views so such must appear as "bafflegab." Must be irritating to be so disadvantaged, one-sided.

To Mark: Note the obfuscation technique of Heil here,
he completely avoids the issue of Robesin's baseless charge that Brian Burke "molests his boy scouts." That way he doesn't 'have' to answer anything and plays the poor wounded morseman extra 'insulted' by others! :-)

Wallace, take your carrot and stick it...or we will sic Grommit on you.

Webster's New World Compact School and Office Dictionary
has two meanings for DIPLOMACY; "(1) The conducting of relations between nations; (2) Tact."

Your attempt at definition is a FAILURE...but that may explain why the USA is not doing well in foreign relations in the last couple of decades or so. Obviously you were not among those actually practicing diplomacy.

cherish, honor and obey morsemanship! Epiphany?

(2) There are MANY in here who are not fans of morsemanship. We are all "special?" Must be, you've insulted all of us.

You might try unsticking that carrot of yours and talk about the subject of the thread. Now WHY is it you condone the postings of filthy falsehoods by this other morseman extra we call 'Robesin?'

Don't try more misdirection or obfuscation. Answer directly. Why do you condone Robesin?

Let it GO, Jimmy. That old argument of yours is senile and in dementia. [some of us think you are, also] That

Do you think that 6 and 9 year olds are MATURE?

>Even 6 year olds and 9 year olds know to speak with "inside voices",

"Inside voices?" You are hearing things that no one else can hear? Amazing!

So, 6 to 9 age group does "Not" shout? Tsk, tsk, you should pay attention to your own classroom, Mother! :-)

Tell us about the "inside voices" you hear. Sounds

Now, now, little Jimmie. Don't pout. Remember you are among some grown-ups here and cannot have your way all the time.

STOP sniveling. Blow your nose.

Poor lilla boy...no-code-test advocates have given their valid arguments in favor of the code test elimination

No sweat to me, Mark. Jimmie wasn't here, wasn't a PARTICIPANT in the zoning board meetings, doesn't own land or property out here but is desperately searching for some kind of "incident" to GET Sigh...Jimmie just can't help hisself, I guess. Morsemen think

No, it's what she _thought_ about you. The new subject line describes her current attitude towards you, and mine, K-Man's, Archie's, Fred's, and every other contributor to this thread that I can recall. Even Kurt has failed to back you up. The only people who will back you at this point are other Outer Filth, such as the ones in RMCR. But considering you obtained the personal contact info via email, even they may turn their noses up at you. But wait, there's always the pedo-k00k, Wiseman, or his frogger. He has no standards at all.

The original poster probably meant a PLL - a phase locked loop - something you didn't even notice, Expert Boy. But you don't put a typical, synthesized VFO on a new frequency by simply doing something to a PLL. You have to modify the divider / multiplier circuitry which takes its input from one or more crystal controlled oscillators. In addition, you'd probably need to change one of the crystals if you were going to go really far out of band. Most CB "modders" don't do any of the above; they change the operation of a logic circuit (sometimes by removing a diode, but usually by replacing a chip) so that certain illegal frequencies can be dialed up in addition to the legal ones.

The original poster - just like you - didn't seem to know what he was talking about.

Now go away and flood some more, Murgatroid. It's the only expertise you have demonstrated in these newsgroups.

Every brand of vehicle has its advantages and disadvantages
but I don't see the government forcing anyone to buy a Chevrolet. What is wrong with a free market of modes?
Nobody is forcing anyone not to use CW.

Projecting again, you can't even afford a spell check, fatass.

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in <VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the "Rhodes" scholar fucks up again and even demonstrates he is an imbecile in <8uqwg.8275$v0.7632@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Right you are, wannabe Rhode's Scholar!"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right."
in<hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>
"Sure I can spell and smell."

"Billy" the NOtwordSmith fucks up again with this incompete sentence in <qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your so called educatiion actually doing for you? Those online classes."

Billy Smith shows off his Pulitzer Prize writing skills in <B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

"Rhodes scholar" Billy Lardass Davies Smith blunders and blows his cover again in <Et%0g.6340$sq5.1769@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Rhode's scholar Scheissman blows his cover again."

Billy "dumbass" Smith steps on his own tiny dick when he tries to criticize others' typos,but he doesn't "perform" well as usual with his blatant "stupidity" in <oCk1g.5958$Es3.3907@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Noteed!!!!!!!!!!!!! Bwhahahahahahah. You're a brilliant one Scheissman.
You even peform stupid acts on your blatant stupidty"

Billy "dropout Lardass" Smith steps on his own dick when he tries to comment on others' spelling abilities, but he "can't" do any better in Message-ID: <mQr3g.8970$sq5.4914@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Woger cant spell very well anyway."

Billy "dropout pizza BOY" Smith fucks up his sentence again when he blathered in <WdZfg.629$lp.259@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"How about those retest letter you received for jamming."

Billy "illiterate " Smith claims to have been in the Library, but he can't even spell "I've" correctly, maybe Billy should check out the English tutoring books there in WpFgg.1310$lf4.1288@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>:

"Ive been to quite a few libraries on Sunday and a lot of them are open."

Billy Smith "the" ill-educated moron fucks up again in <4zxLg.15720$Qf.5115@newsread2.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Roger is about to finally have th final episode where..."

I didn't mean to imply that there is a single mode that will handle all types of distortion, just that there are specific modes available that handle each type. And somethimes absolutely no digital mode or CW can get through, but that circumstance happens less often as time goes on, the exception being CW's cacpbilities aren't changing.

He isn't in jail over the weekend, Lardass, your "he's in jail" is very lame, pizza boy.
But then, you aren't exactly Mensa material or even "Camp-We-Can-Do" material.

Yeah, that'd be Duke, Chung, Jon Young, and a few others. Oh, and you.

It's poorly written (needs heavy editing by someone even more anally retentive than myself, because that's the only type of person who could do it without having a meltdown), ill-thought-out, and a generally bad read. No one in their right mind would read it twice.

As Gandalf has repeatedly asked, who the fuck are you to say which religions are "important", and how do you "easily show them impossible"?

This has been addressed by others. Suffice to say, your neologism means more to you than to anyone else.

That does not necessarily follow. St. Augustine thought so, but he thought many strange things which in our(tino) time might have earned him the name of "k00k".

No, it does not, except for certain brands of Xian.

One word I would not use to describe the OT Yahweh is "omni-benevolent", except for what his press agents would say, especially in the NT. Hence, being only omniscient and omnipotent isn't a contradiction.

> God at the start of creation must look at what his considered creation

Presumably, he has to take the package deal. Otherwise, he could fuxx0r it up by turning everyone into puppets, and himself into the Great Masturbator.

No, that's nonsense.

According to "many-worlds" theory, he creates /both/ futures, and all the others, as well. Thus, free will and predestination are both rendered irrelevant.

Well, some Xians believe in predestination, yes. I think they're sillier than most, but I think you're silly, too.

That does not necessarily follow. St. Augustine thought so, but he thought many strange things which in our(tino) time might have earned him the name of "k00k".

No, it does not, except for certain brands of Xian.

One word I would not use to describe the OT Yahweh is "omni-benevolent", except for what his press agents would say, especially in the NT. Hence, being only omniscient and omnipotent isn't a contradiction.

> God at the start of creation must look at what his considered creation

Presumably, he has to take the package deal. Otherwise, he could fuxx0r it up by turning everyone into puppets, and himself into the Great Masturbator.

No, that's nonsense.

According to "many-worlds" theory, he creates /both/ futures, and all the others, as well. Thus, free will and predestination are both rendered irrelevant.

Well, some Xians believe in predestination, yes. I think they're sillier than most, but I think you're silly, too.

Hi Dave,

I've seen you refer to service vs hobby a number of times in this thread. As a noob here, could you explain this? What do you mean by 'service'? Getting on, talking to others...communicating with others seems more of a hobby to me.

Can you explain the service aspects of ham radio that you are referring to....can you define for me 'service' and why amateur radio is a service to you rather than a hobby?

Thanks in advance,

Yep. That'll have us splitting our sides with laughter.

"From these studies and many more, it is evident that homosexuals molest children at a far greater rate than do their heterosexual counterparts.
While they comprise only 1-2% of the population, they are responsible

All throughout Title 47 Code of Federal Regulations, the word
"service" is used as the type and kind of radio being regulated.
It is a regulatory term in that context. One can write the FCC and get that information.

All too often, amateurs who think too much of themselves try to use "service" as equivalent to some (undefined) "national service" such as being a part of the military or a government position. :-)

Part 95 describes Citizens Band Radio SERVICE and the Radio Control Radio SERVICE. :-)

Well, I'm not a dog fancier. My wife has three cats. :-)

Them little "weenie dogs" are nice (as dogs). My analogy was on the self-defined, self-righteous mantle of "leadership" of the morse zealots in here...as if they were Big Dogs such as German Shepherds. :-) They aren't and homemade elevator shoes won't make them big men (or dogs).

Jimmie cut loose in the kennel, trying to take a bite out of me on a subject very far removed from amateur radio.
He was toothless on that, poor chap, but did give me some textual exercise. :-) Unable to grasp a hammer (or a concept), he tried to construct a straw structure
AS IF he was knowledgeable about MY residence territory.
He isn't, wasn't previously. But, he has some kind of terrible irritation, maybe a burr or lice, and wants to bark, bark, bark about some "equivalancy" of homes to
"the (amateur) bands." Illogical in extremis.

Jimmie ought to learn that amateur radio is NOT run by "da boyz in da 'hood" (i.e., licensed amateurs) but the FCC. Hams do NOT have "eminent domain" of "the bands"

but the government DOES. You and most of the others in here are too young to have witnessed the outraged uproar over 27 MHz CB when it was created out of the TAKEN-AWAY amateur 11m band. Olde tymers of that time thought They owned that band. Olde tymers of now still think they "own" the present ham bands, their "'hood" and try to mark their territory. Their marking graffitti is poorly done and most of their marking is done by urination. :-) [a natural act of feral males, by the way]

Brian is a no-code-test advocate and is also involved

You know, Leonard, it is a fact that I'd put more faith in the ARRL

He can mention it until he's blue in the face. The fact is, I'm not responsible for how others operate their stations. I'm not responsible for looking them up in a database, for knowing where they are permitted to operate or for ascertaining that they are the fellow to whom a license has been issued. I'm responsible for operating my station in

So when you were reporting data from the FCC, you did it because you felt the need to be an authority figure? After all, you cribbed the material from another source.

Wow! If you and Brian had been ARRL members and you lived in the Atlantic Division and if Carl wasn't disqualified by virtue of his employment and if Carl hadn't written the things he'd written, you might have changed the history of amateur radio in this country.

I've replied previously. Perhaps you missed the replies or maybe you didn't understand them. There's "carrot and stick", "carrot" and "stick". I don't understand your vision of U.S. Foreign Policy. It was worked very well in the past couple of decades. We don't have foreign relations with non-governments. The Soviet Union is gone. Milosovich is gone. Saddam is gone. The Taliban regime is gone. The Baltic republics are free. Poland is free. Hungary is free. Czechoslovakia (now as the Czech Republic and Slovakia) is free. Romania is free.
Albania is free. Eastern Germany is free and has been united with the rest of Germany. Shall I go on?

Allow me to query you on whether you LIKE to put down those who do not agree with you or if you feel badly about doing do. What feelings go through your being when using terms like "Mother Superior", "Sister Nun of the Above", "Robesin", "Herr Robust", "Dudly", "Mama Dee", "little yourself. Are you like the mother crab, advising her offspring not to

Do you, Brian and Mark stick together for any particular reason? Is it because the three of you find common ground in your abhorrence of anything to do with morse code or is it that water seeks its own level?

That's wrong too. In "Ethiopia or places like that", there's not much trash lying about. Things get used and used and used. Plastic bags are rinsed out. Coke cans are have their tops and bottoms removed and are cut open and rolled flat and used as siding or roofing shingles.

Why are you worried about Mark's yard, UnWiseman? Is it a fetish with you?

Forgive the top posting

I was requested to define "Amateur Service" ... what service?

"47 CFR 97.3 Definitions:

(a) Definitions of terms used in Part 97 are:

(1) Amateur operator ... redacted
(2) Amateur radio Services ... redacted
(3) Amateur Satellite Service ... redacted
(4) Amateur Service. A radio communication for the purpose of self training, intercommunication and technical investigations carries out by amateurs, that is, duly authorized persons interested in the radio technique solely with a personal aim and without pecuniary interest."

Definitions [a][5] through [a][46] and section [b] in it's entirety have been excluded.

There are three elements of the amateur service: 1) 'self training' in any and all aspects of electro-magnetic radio telecommunication [notice this is listed first]; 2) 'intercommunication' includes talking, satellite techniques, television techniques [yes, amateurs can design and operate wideband tv], microwave techniques, digital techniques, spread spectrum techniques, CW, AM, SSB, FM, etc.; 3) 'technical investigations' include propagation studies at HF, VHF, UHF and microwave, EME activities, antenna developments, new modulation modes [particularly in digital communications], error correction techniques in digital communication, bandwidth compression techniques, and any number of Physics and Electronic areas of investigation.

Amateur [non financially compensated] radio is much more than buying a box and using it to just talk with someone. IMO, it is a service wherein the amateur, a duly authorized person, is committed to self training [education] in some components of the electromagnetic radio communication arts and sciences.

"Duly Authorized" requires authorization by competent authority after a demonstration of some related skill or knowledge by the person seeking to be 'duly authorized'. If a demonstrable skill level is NOT required then "Duly Authorized' does not make sense.

If you just want to talk, the 11 meter band or the FRS will meet your needs.

Now remember what was discussed in the sensitivity sessions, Roger.
Think nice thoughts. Remember the lovely poetry you read yesterday.
Think of flowers and birds and puppies and kittens--and try not to picture them in sexual acts with humans.

You're quite right, Roger. You've only been held in a cell locally; you've not been in prison. You might want to tone down your corrections

You're going to have to slow down on these wild accusations. Why,

I don't have to answer anything on any topic to you, old soldier. You aren't in charge. At ease!

I pointed out the peculiarity of Brian's chit-chatting with Mark on a number of topics while not acknowledging that Mark has engaged in wholesale flooding of this newsgroup with his mindless drivel.

We? Who the hell is "we"? You cried out for information on how diplomacy works. I provided it. If you don't care for my description, you are entitled to receive double your old beliefs back in exchange.

> Webster's New World Compact School and Office Dictionary
> has two meanings for DIPLOMACY; "(1) The conducting of

...and I've told you just how diplomacy works. The carrot and stick, just the carrot and just the stick is exactly how diplomacy works between nations. The tact part comes into play in the manner in which we explain how we intend to use the carrot and stick, just the carrot or just the stick.

> Your attempt at definition is a FAILURE...

My attempt at definition is very, very accurate. The U.S. has sometimes told another country (in a very tactful manner) that it will offer incentives if that country does something which the U.S. wants it to do.
It explains that if the country does not take that course of action, that a trade embargo or blockade might result. [the carrot and stick]

On other occasions, the U.S. lets it be known that it would look very favorably on another country's decision to take a particular couse of action. No penalties are implied. [the carrot]

There are times when the U.S. feels that neither the first or second course of action has produced the desired result. The U.S. may choose to intervene economically or militarily. [the stick]

You don't give orders here or in amateur radio.

You are certainly "any citizen". You've had your input accepted. Happy?

Can you tell us what percentage of changes to the FCC regs governing amateur radio have come about because of input or ideas from ordinary citizens, not associated in any way with amateur radio?

There you have a dilemma. Alternatively, you've told us that you don't have any desire to obtain an amateur radio license and that you've had a decades-long interest in amateur radio.

My back yard is at 1520 feet ASL (that's a term from topography referring to "above sea level". If it floods, those at 820 feet are going to be UW (an insurance company term for "under water"). We like our rocks in their undecomposed state. They're even more stable that way.

How is it "assassination", Len? When it came time for development in your area, you fought against progress and change. You defended your perceived turf. But, when it comes to amateur radio...

You're pretty two faced, Len.

I don't normally recommend this to CB'ers because 99.9% of time, CB'ers screw up their radios when they take the covers off of them, and then they go to ham radio operators and ham newsgroups and whine for help.

Anyway, take the covers off and look at the componant side of the PC board. Look for chips. The PLL is one you will see the board, but look at other ones too. Normally on most chips, the date of manufacture is stamped on it. Two digit year number, then either two digit month number or week number. It gives a rough idea of how old the radio is and you know at least the radio was assembled sometime after the latest date you find on the chips. You also find a date on the PC board when the board was etched, the CB would have been manufactured sometime after that date.

Todd,

When the US marshal shows up at Omega One, will you go live so we can hear the hand-cuffs click & hear you screaming: "It's not fair, it not fair, mommy, daddy, help me."

You're welcome, My pleasure.

There's nothing like the sound of a good loud fart or belch on CB channel 19 to get the conversations going especially when they're broadcast over-modulated with echo and punctuated with a roger beep.

For all the verbiage posted, I don't see anyone else here saying they let the ARRL BoD and officers know of their support for Carl's candidacy.

He sure did say some wild things here in years gone by. Perhaps they would have come back to haunt him - or perhaps the things he's done since then would be seen as more important.

But in 2001 he upgraded to Extra, got a 2x1 vanity call, set up a station, got on HF and worked some DX.

And about then he mellowed quite a bit. Became much less argumentative and much more agreeable and consensus-finding, without changing his basic positions on the issues.

He also hasn't posted here much if at all since then.

Unethical is what I'd call it.

But the point is that the judicial system has methods besides self-disqualification to prevent conflict of interest. It does not rely solely or primarily on judges or jurors disqualifying themselves.

Of course - but they are called upon only occasionally, for a specific case. ARRL directors serve a term during which they decide many policy issues.

Perhaps they thought they would be considered incompetent if they did not enforce the bylaws.

I suppose some of them are. Carl isn't, obviously.

Maybe when I retire, I might run for director or vice-director of the Atlantic Division. Say, there's a ticket - Carl in one of those jobs and me in the other.

Both are mistakes. The first is more common.

I don't know anyone who does the latter. Lots of people do the former.

I don't think I've ever claimed to be a "PROFESSIONAL". I may be a Incorrect!

The recent ARRL proposal to the FCC proposed eliminating the 5 wpm code for General licenses. It would only be retained for Extra under the ARRL proposal.

IOW, they advocated eliminating the Morse Code exam for access to all amateur HF/MF frequencies except a few segments on 80, 40, 20 and 15 meters.

And this wasn't the first time. Back in 1990, ARRL advocated for a no-code-test amateur license for VHF/UHF.

"they always advocate the Morse Code Exam" is simply not true.

I have mixed feelings here. On the one hand, it's immensely satisfying

Damn, that was close! She won by a whisker. At least we(tinw) can be sure
Mr. Donald "Septic" Alford will be a contender again, anyway.

I should've nominated the Trio for this, back when I had the chance.

A big vote! Well, compared to some of the ones I saw last year, anyway.

> For what purpose is Jim constantly posting amateur numbers?

If you mean me, here's why:

First off, I usually post them twice a month - hardly "constantly"

The reason is to keep a record of how many individuals have FCC-issued amateur licenses. Unlike websites, those posts of mine with the numbers will be available as long as Usenet is archived.

Whenever you see license numbers tallied, it's important to note which licenses are counted. Do the totals include licenses that are expired but in the grace period? Those on hamdata.com do, mine don't. Do the totals include club, RACES, and other station-only licenses? Etc.

> There is a reason that the ARRL membership numbers are so abysmal even > though they are the only national amateur radio organization of any > consequence.

"Abysmal"? How so?

And as for being "only national amateur radio organization of any consequence" - what about RSGB? RAC? JARL?

For that matter, what about NCI, which claims to be international, charges no dues and has never-expiring memberships - yet in a decade or more hasn't reached a membership level of even 10,000?

The reasons ARRL isn't bigger are:

1) Some hams are inactive - either temporarily or permanently.

2) ARRL membership isn't inexpensive.

3) Some hams disagree with some ARRL policies, and won't join until those policies change. Sometimes the policies are those of decades ago.

4) Some hams just aren't "joiners".

Indeed. I'm still a member.

When Bill Sohl gets around to asking for a donation, I'll be sending it.

More would be joiners if there were something they could get behind.
With more joining, membership could become inexpensive. Past mistakes need to be admitted as mistakes, and apologies issued to those who have lost priveleges in the inventive licensing fiasco before those hams expire.

...Though I'm sure that you see everything differently.

No. The point is that ethical people behave ethically. You missed that part.

That would make you virtually unique on the Citizen's Band.

One of the reasons for the desirability of the classic 148GTL
Sideband was the ability to crank up the output power and modulation depth by simply opening up a couple of pots.

Though this was not the official position of Cobra, I remember sitting in the service department when one of the techs told caller after caller how to make this adjustment.

Many that left the building for the personal use of staff had also been so adjusted.

Then again, the chief engineer had a Galaxy (complete with roger beep and reverb) with about 100 watts connected to a yagi on the roof at Cortland St, so liberties with the regs were not uncommon at Cobra.

Later models have been revised so such power adjustments were not simple to make.

The above band operation is new to me. Although I did work with someone, some years ago, who had modified an old Midland to work above the band, fiercely arguing her right to do so.

There was a crackdown in St Louis that year, and it was sternly explained unto her that she had been misinformed.

SC, without giving out too much information, approximately how far are you from Toad? If you're hearing him at a distance of more than a few

I learned sufficient code to gain my upgrade to General in 2005 and passed the written test the same evening. I have no interest in using code further. I may change my mind on that later, but given my advanced years, the point may be moot. My primary interest as a Ham is in fiddling with antennas, only one of the 11 antennas scattered about my 7 acres was purchased. There are 5 at my detached shop/shack and 6 more back at the house to use when I desire air conditioning while pursuing my hobby. Three of these are indoor dipoles for use when bad weather threatens, as it often does here in southern Oklahoma. I hope all you other gentlemen continue to enjoy the access to the Amateur Bands allowed by what ever license class you possess.

>> Tsk. I'm acquainted with most of those...IN THIS AREA.
>> You are NOT.

>I think Jim and I are acquainted with what goes on IN AMATEUR RADIO.

You have many years as a licensed radio amateur. But, you are NOT, nor have you ever been, a PARTICIPANT in Los Angeles Zoning Board activities, meetings, nor a PARTICIPANT in owning real property in Los Angeles County.

Real property and Zoning ordinances are NOT, nor have they ever been a "radio subject." End this sub-thread because it does not apply.

N2EY tried to magnify one of my old statements, taking it well out of context, attempting to MANUFACTURE some personal "defect" of mine. His product QC was terrible and the product FAILED. N2EY was a NON-PARTICIPANT in real estate and Zoning in Los Angeles. In other words, he didn't know his ass from a hole in the ground on that.

However, to charge that "I know nothing of amateur radio" is INCORRECT, IN ERROR. One does NOT need to be a licensed radio amateur to "know about it." United States radio amateur activity is NOT "secret." Several radio amateur interest group organizations freely offer detailed information on what they think US amateur radio involves.

Amateur 'radio' technology is the SAME as every other radio technology, although lagging behind the rest of the radio

world in a few technical areas. NONE of that technology is "secret" nor is it "revealed" to someone just receiving a federal license permitting the RF energy emission according to government regulations. Those government regulations are open to all, not secret, and are freely available over the US Government Printing Office website.

Anyone with a receiver can hear for themselves what radio amateurs DO "on the air." US government (FCC) regulations forbid the use of encryption (for deliberate obfuscation of information transmitted) in amateur radio transmissions. There is NO RESTRICTION on personal communications off-air by any citizen with another citizen who is a licensed radio amateur. I have several friends of long-standing who are licensed radio amateurs, one of them going back to US Army service days.

The FCC does not restrict ANYONE from communicating with the FCC on ANY RADIO SERVICE or any other interstate communications service they regulate. They are required BY LAW to be open to communications from ALL CITIZENS.

By personal experience, I have been involved in HF radio transmission beginning 53 years ago and have been granted a Commercial radio operator license in 1956. I AM experienced in radio communications from VLF on up to 25 GHz. US radio amateurs are NOT allocated any bands below 160m and the allocated emission types are limited (again BY LAW), such limitations lesser than my hands-on experiences. I have written for, been published, even employed as an editor for an amateur radio magazine, an independent that existed for 22 years.

>You are NOT.

You are hopelessly stuck in a personal attack mode and will not leave it.

To reiterate: YOU are NOT INVOLVED in Los Angeles real estate nor the Zoning laws of this city. Further, YOU know bupkis about that as it applies here. It is NOT a subject for this newsgroup, not even close to that.

Your only effort in this thread is to attempt some personal denigration of myself. That wastes time for others, does little except making you look the asshole, and is a FAILURE.

No. Your "reply" in regards to 'diplomacy' was a joke.

You have FAILED to reply on the big question on why you condone filthy falsehoods written by Steven James Robeson, K4YZ, about Brian Burke and his involvement with Scouting.

Answer the main question existing before your latest posting: Why do you condone filthy falsehoods about pedophilia levelled against another amateur (stated many times) by an extra class radio amateur in this forum?

>... Is there anything
>in your behavior which you find to be less than admirable?

Tsk, tsk. More misdirection. You now charge others, especially those who challenge you, with "imperfections" and deliberately avoid answering a direct question.

Why do you condone filthy falsehoods about pedophilia levelled against another amateur (stated many times)
by an extra class radio amateur in this forum?

Do you think that Brian Burke MOLESTS boy scouts?
Answer yes or no.

I do NOT believe that pedophilia charge and applaud Brian's work with Scouting. I hold "Robesin's" charge that Burke is a pedophile to be a FILTHY FALSEHOOD.

By your NON comment on an obvious filthy falsehood, you tacitly condone such things stated by a fellow amateur extra.

But you are happy to see it happen. A fellow amateur extra mouthing obscenities against another amateur, a number of filthy falsehoods about his "pedophilia."

>I've condoned nothing and have no horse in this race.

You say NOTHING about it. That is condoning Robeson's conduct.

On the other hand you make denigrations and falsehoods about others who disagree with you on the morse code test issue. That is hypocrisy in action, amateur extra style, done by morsemen in here.

>I don't have to answer anything on any topic to you, old soldier.

Yes, you HAVE to answer to someone if not me.

(1) YOU are NOT the newsgroup moderator.

(2) YOU are NOT the FCC

(3) YOU are NOT representing all of amateur radio.

(4) YOU are NOT of such a divine status that you can

Yet you tacitly CONDONE Robeson's "mindless drivel" in thousands of postings that existed before.

Google statistics on rec.radio.amateur.policy indicate that Cecil Moore has the highest number of postings in that newsgroup. In second place is "K4YZ." Cecil has been a participant in this newsgroup for years and well before Robeson entered...yet Robeson is almost on-par with Cecil's total message count now.

That is YOUR hypocrisy without question.

You have a personal dislike of Mark Morgan and his opinions.
So, you feel "entitled" to attack Mark's postings? Of course you must...you insult him personally at nearly every opportunity. You must feel "superior" to "lesser" humans?

>... You cried out for information on how diplomacy works.

INCORRECT. I stated that YOU, David Heil, LACKED DIPLOMACY
SKILLS despite being in the State Department of the USA.

You attempted to misdirect and obfuscate that by some kind of childish JOKE "definition" that was INCORRECT.

>I provided it.

You did NOT "provide" any definition.

Webster's New World Compact School and Office Dictionary
has two meanings for DIPLOMACY; "(1) The conducting of relations between nations; (2) Tact."

If you wish another CORRECT definition, go to another dictionary. Do not try some simplistic comedic description about serious matters.

>At no time have I denied insulting you, Len. You ask for everything >your receive. You're a horse's patoot.

That is your OPINION, not a statement of fact.

It is as devoid of TACT as possible.

>> Now WHY is it you >> condone the postings of filthy falsehoods by this

>I've condoned nothing of the kind.

You have tacitly CONDONED those filthy falsehoods by saying NOTHING about them for years.

Let me be more direct: Do YOU believe that Brian Burke engages in pedophilia with boy scouts? Answer yes or no. Do not try misdirection into challenges of others' alleged misdeeds. If you attempt misdirection to avoid any answer, that question will be repeated in here in subsequent postings.

>Here it is, quite directly, Len: I have condoned no such thing, >certainly no one named "Robesin".

You HAVE tacitly CONDONED the posting statements of Steven James Robeson, K4YZ, alleging that Brian Burke, N0IMD, has engaged in pedophilia with Boy Scouts. You are all licensed radio amateurs, yourself and Robeson (whom the rest of us call 'Robesin') being amateur extras.

You tacitly CONDONED Robesons previous postings of other falsehoods to other individuals by saying NOTHING, yet YOU have engaged in personal insults and denigrations of those same others.

HYPOCRISY in action, NOT "diplomacy."

Why not? Picking what you want to use isn't okay? You don't want alternatives to CW. Or alternatives to digital? Or , for that matter, alternatives to voice modes.

So for you choice is bad?

It's much too warm for the hot buttered rum. I'm still enjoying mint

Los Angeles real estate isn't very different from real estate in other parts of California or even from real estate in other large metropolitan areas. Of course the regulations governing it could certainly lag areas in the East.

not only on the internet, but in printed form from a wide variety of

I haven't chosen to "emulate robeson tactic" or "Wismens". I don't post as much as Steve, don't read or respond to Mark's posts and if I was "Wismen", I'd be directing a torrent to filth toward Mark and numerous others.

I hope that meets with Len's approval.

You have no basis on which to make such a statement. My feelings on the matter are unknown to you.

Would you like to phrase that in the form of a sentence?

That is absolutely correct.

That is a complete falsehood. You are left without knowing my feelings.

I certainly do make denigrations of you, Len. Your charge of falsehoods is, itself, a falsehood.

> That is hypocrisy in action, amateur extra

That's manure, Len. You can't lump all Amateur Extras and you can't lump all morse code supporters or users together in making your sweeping generalization.

Show me.

Nor are you.

Nor are you.

I come a lot closer to representing amateur radio than some non-participant who appoints himself an advocate for something-or-other in amateur radio.

> (4) YOU are NOT of such a divine status that you can > do whatever you want to do, yet forbid others from

Remember that you used that statement in that manner. It applies to a Leonard H. Anderson. What's the subject--whatever Mark Morgan changes it to? Is today's subject "what its like to lick...", or is it "kooks on parade" or "koks on parade"?

> (5) YOU are NOT of such a divine status that you are > "better" in every way than the rest of us and

You've been criticizing me for ten years, Len, though you were never able to make up your mind about my divine status. According to you, sometimes I am divine and other times I'm not.

That's simply false. I've condoned nothing.

That newsgroup? Do you mean THIS newsgroup? That's nice, Len. You've obviously drawn some conclusion from this.

> That is YOUR hypocrisy without question.

My hyprocrisy? Did Cecil ever run a long thread consisting of "what its like to lick..."? Did Steve?

> You have a personal dislike of Mark Morgan and his opinions.

Granted. I killfiled him some time ago.

Read above.

That's the opinion of one who knows as little of the Department of State as he does amateur radio. You didn't even know how the carrot and stick works.

The definition is a correct summation of the entire world of diplomacy.
Make book on it.

The method I described is quite correct. It is used constantly in our diplomacy. I explained it in some detail. I provided examples. That you are unable to grasp it, is not my problem.

I believe it to be both my opinion and fact. You wouldn't want it put to a vote.

It was stated as simply as I could make it. It is my firm belief.

Capitalizing still won't win you an argument, Len. I've condoned nothing of the kind.

Subpoena me, kindly old gent.

Repeat it all you like. You don't give orders to anyone.

Again, I've responded before as seen above. I'll respond again. I have condoned nothing of the sort.

> You are all licensed

Your "the rest of us call" is an outright lie. Use the man's name.
Can't you bring yourself to do it?

Yep, we're all licensed radio amateurs. Write a complaint to the FCC.

> You tacitly CONDONED Robesons previous postings of other

Once again, that is a falsehood. I have condoned no such thing.
I am responsible for the postings of no one other than myself.

Brush up on your googling and see when it was that I last responded to Mark Morgan directly. I see his posts only when someone replies to him.

Your claim is based upon erroneous or false information, kindly old gent.

Different brands of cars are not dissimilar enough to compare to different types of modes so the analogy doesn't work. The different brands of cars (Chevy, Ford, Chrysler, etc) are more like comparing a Bencher paddle to an MFJ paddle to a Kent paddle, etc. If you use CW, you pick your own type of paddle. If you drive, you pick your own type of car.

Who is "Brian?"

You NEVER seem to have a problem with Robesin's use of "Brain." Ever.

But here you are complaining about other people again.

That doesn't work either. That comparison would be like comparing a Interesting...Lennie suggesting that someone else "...pick up a (romance) novel and read about what would happen..."

You see, it seems that most of what Lennie "knows" about "radio" and other subjects IS from what he's read...NOT EXPERIENCED...in those realms.

And from all apparent evidence (Lennie's own words...), Lennie READS a lot, but hasn't really DONE much...

Here's a list of what Lennie is NOT:

Lennie is NOT a licensed Amateur Radio operator...Never was...never will be. Although he's held jobs as a radio MECHANIC in years past, what Lennie "knows" about OPERATING radios (save CB and channelized plug-and-play radios) comes from READING about it. There are grade school children with more EXPERIENCE in REAL radio operating than Lennie could hope to obtain if he got a license today.

Lennie QUOTES a lot of books and often refers to a lifelong friendship with a couple of persons who DO have licenses, but Lennie just can't seem to get over that huge, looming hurdle...The one labled "EGO"...that would allow him to take the same exams that every other mortal has to take to get the aforementioned license.

His sole claim-to-fame is an inside-out theoretical expertise on a military radio asset known as SINCGARS...Not that this radio is even remotely related to AMATEUR RADIO, but whenever Lennie get's backed into a corner (which is more often than he's comfortable with...) he bombs the RRAP NG with yet another re-telling of how SINCGARS has saved the day for military communications...Not AMATUER...But MILITARY...with or without J-38 attached.

Oh...yes....Lennie NEVER carried a SINCGARS radio. Not once.

Lennie is NOT a licensed Aviator. Yet Lennie's presumed to tell those of us who are all about aerial navigation, aircraft types, missions, functions, etc. He WAS a student pilot some time in the late 50's or early 60's, but never managed to solo or complete the program, even to the very basic Private Pilot/SEL. Merely one of many things that Lennie started but never finished. Lennie's sole present day "experience" in Aviation is monitoring the AWOS and ATIS at Los Angeles International Airport on his scanner.

Please note that in the aforementioned licensing issues, Lennie lapses into tales of "...I had better things to do..." when pushed on the subject. He can't seem to explain how it is that OTHER persons manage to carry the same educational, employment, domestic and military service "loads" and STILL manage to pass an Amateur exam, though. Seems that by claimig such greater noble endevaors, he's immunized himself from "why haven't YOU done it" inquiries. None of which, of course, explains why he hasn't done those things NOW that he's "retired from regular hours..."

Lennie is NOT a licensed psychiatrist. Yet Lennie presumes to make diagnosis of mental aberations, define personality types, and otherwise attempt to appear as though he has a "grip" on the human psyche. The evidence is that there's very little that Lennie has a grip on. Most of this was information gleaned from his wife's correspondence course texts that are stored in some storage facility "up north" (the same place where his "expired" GROL is stored, no doubt). He's often caught in "pot calling the kettle black" situations as he often accuses others of doing exactly those things that he's been doing (as archived in Google) for over a decade.

Lennie is NOT a member of any public service organization, paid OR volunteer. However Lennie's gone to great lengths to presume to tell others who ARE in such organizations how meaningless thier services are and how wasted thier efforts are. Lennie's even presumed to express an INFORMED opinion of these organizations dating back to his pre-teen years. This is most true of persons who are in volunteer roles. According to Lennie, only those persons who receive monetary compensation for thier services are "true" emergency or "Public Service" providers. That a great proportion of such services are rendered by volunteers in the United States falls on deaf ears to "Show-Me-The-Money Anderson".

Lennie is NOT currently a member of the Armed Forces, their auxiliaries or any state defense or homeland security program. He DID serve ONE voluntary tour of duty in the US Army, ending in 1956, however he's not worn a uniform since then. Of course that ONE tour of duty over 50 years ago seems to have imbued him with an all-knowing wisdom of "all-things-military" before and ever since. He's even gone as far as to presume to discuss the aircraft types and missions flown by the auxiliary of the Air Force, yet even that data was dated by almost TWO decades.

Of course Lennie FREQUENTY switches into his "VFW bar room war vet" mode, presuming to tell us about what it's like to work under the threat of aircraft that WERE NOT in service when he was on Active Duty and to tell us what it's like to be on the receiving end of incomming artillery barrages despite having never been "down range". All tales no doubt inspired by Clancy novels. His tales also include trying to embellish his own "service" by somehow tying his service to that of a unit he onced belonged to that had KIA's in the Korean conflict...THREE YEARS before Lennie was even inducted and no where near the battleground where the KIA's occured.

Also, no one may have done anything even remotely patriotic if their duties didn't include uniformed service.

This is assinine, of course, considering that the military does NOT carry out it's mission without those engineers, machinists, technicians and other defense industry laborers who provide the machines and the technology to "fight smart". (Anyone ever hear of "Rosie the Riveter"? Kelly Johnson? Robert Oppenheimer?) Those persons are subject to immediate demeaning and humiliation at the hands of a veteran who should know better since he had to use that technology. He (Lennie) often brags about the make-and-model radios he worked on during his tour in the Army...I am willing to bet the folks that designed and built those radios were not wearing khaki when they did it.

Lennie's NOT a healthcare provider at ANY level, yet he's presumed to tell people who ARE healthcare providers what is and isn't "policy" and "practice" in that field. Lennie could doubtfully apply a bandaid to an abrasion without reading the instructions first. But again, Lennie's presumed to enter into this discipline as "knowledgeable", yet turns up as short on knowledge and experience.

Lennie is NOT a parent. He's never sired or raised children, yet he presumes to tell those who HAVE done it all about what constitutes a "mature" or "responsible" child. He's gone as far as to suggest to the Federal Communications Commission that persons under a certain age should not be allowed to be licensed radio operators due to "maturity" issues. Lennie's been repeatedly asked to pony-up some form of evidence, perferably in the form of FCC NAL's or NOV's served upon "underage" operators to substantiate this concept, but so far he's not been able to put a finger on a single one.

Lennie's NOT a "veteran" of duties in the "Foreign Service", yet again he presumes to demean and otherwise attempt to diminish the service of those that are or were. Lennie bristles at the suggestion that HE is anything less than an "expert" in his supposed realm of expertise based upon years of service, but again, Lennie attempts to exact a toll on those who would report career length experiences DOING the things Lennie can only SPECULATE about. This inlcudes duty postings, communications systems, political circumstances, etc. No lack of experience will deter Leonard H. Anderson from attempting to look "informed" on issues he clearly has no experience in.

This list could go on-and-on...Lennie's "CV" of "life long interests but never quite got there" bullets is long and lackluster. Perhaps one day before the actuary tables catch up to him, Lennie might actually get involved in some of the things he's presumed to express "expert opinion" on in this forum, but that's very, VERY improbable...

There's nothing "ad hominem" about comments directed towards Morkie the Moron, KB9RQZ. His CV of idiocity is volumous.

Who's "Robesin"...?!?!

What's the problem, Brain? Can't stand it when you have to face the facts that you are NOT perceived as the noble-but-victimized defender of truth, justice, and the American way that you percieve yourself as being?

> But here you are complaining about other people again.

Uhhhhhhhhh...What in Dave's comments were UNTRUE?

Dave's comments were dead on accurate.

And Brain...Since YOU are presuming to back Dave into a corner about not chastising me over practices YOU dislike, one HAS TO ASK why YOU don't chastise Lennie or Mork for THIER use of profanities, deceit, name calling and other less-than-mature behaviour in RRAP. Thier

You certainly "have thier back" without condition. WHY would YOU

I dont think Limbaugh would let someone else carry a

It works perfectly. A 4WD could save your life when

Not a socialist, but a globalist. Of course, Republicans want to bring US wages down to that of the third world. Their goal is to turn the US into some third world shit hole, but live in guarded/gated communities.
Unfortunately, shit for brains vote for Republicans.

The historians argue if Bush or Grant is worse. Since I didn't live

It's Not a Code, no code problem, it's a generational problem!

In the past week, the articles that seemed to get the most play on ham sites were the Southern Border Volunteers and the lack of brotherhood in ham radio.

I was amazed at the responses that were both negative and critical of supporting a group that wanted to protect our borders. I suspect some passengers were probably tsk tsking the only guy in four airplanes with the guts to do something to stop the rag heads on 9/11. How else can you explain rag heads armed ONLY with box cutters were able to control three airplanes? Many of the younger generation find it easier to criticize than take action.

Ham radio went to hell when Dick Bash got involved with his published "cheat sheets".

This piece is from the prospective of a ham with over 50 years spewing RF throughout the world. At 68 years of age, I look back at my start in ham radio, appearing before a steely eyed FCC examiner in Norfolk Virginia. I missed the distance for a Conditional license by about 11 miles. I had to walk between school and home in the snow, uphill both ways.

Do I think that everyone should have to do what I did to become a ham? Nope, I can live with the memorized exams, the no code, etc. Like the parable of the workers in the vineyard, I accept the rules have changed. At no place in the parable does it tell the late arriving workers to ridicule those that worked all day.

Just as sure as these words are on your screen, you too will someday be an old fart just like me. As you enter the dotage of your life, health concerns and the condition of your aged friends, becomes more of a concern. We, like you, used to talk about more contemporary subjects. Unlike a number of you, we allowed the older folks to have their conversations without ridicule. It is called respect, and is a two way street. Realize that when I was a newby, I suffered the same as you at the hands of the old farts. They believed that for you to enter their group, you should first show respect and learn to snatch the pebble from their hand.

None of you started in your working life as the CEO of the company, yet many of today's generation feel that a newly minted license conveys total knowledge. What you have is a license to learn, take advantage of it and the brotherhood will naturally follow.

If we all took the time to show each other respect, and be less quick to judge, not only would ham radio be better, but our lives as well.

Still doesn't work since the FCC doesn't mandate use of CW.

This post goes to show how little you truly know about CB. Your a CB poser who's only interest in the hobby is financial. Your post was an admission that you do not talk on CB. If you're getting hate and discontent on the CB as soon as you transmit, then you must have pissed off a lot of your local

His program selection was bad, bad, bad, last weekend. A barrage of old 30's & 40's tunes for a while. He even had Shirley Temple singing "The Good Ship Lollipop", ROFL, and I'm not making that up either.

I'm a long way from Todd. I can only hear Omega One if there's propagation. I don't really hear Omega fifteen hours a day, I made that up, but I can hear it at least five hours a day, and a lot longer if propagation is good.

The hijackers on Flight 93 were stopped by more than one guy. And the people on the other planes did not know the hijackers were on a suicide mission.

> How else can you explain
> rag heads armed ONLY with box cutters were able to control three airplanes?

Simple:

- The hijackers killed one or two people who tried to resist.
- Then they said they had a bomb aboard.
- They also said that if the passengers did as they were told, nobody else would get hurt.

You have to remember that before that terrible morning 5 years ago, suicide-hijacking was unknown. Hijackers took over planes to get ransom, or to get transportation somewhere, or for political reasons.
They always had demands and always promised that if their demands were met, nobody would get hurt or killed. And the conventional way of dealing with them was to do what they wanted, get the plane on the ground safely, negotiate, and then go after them on the ground.

All that changed on Sept 11, 2001. Look what happened when that shoe-bomb guy tried it.

The folks on Flight 93 had two things the people on the other flights did not:

1) They knew the rules had changed - they knew what the hijackers were going to do.

2) They had time to formulate a plan and time to implement it.

Well, I don't know if it "went to hell" but I agree 100% that Bash's "cheat sheets" were a very bad thing for amateur radio.

Remember, though, that it was the top folks at FCC who decided not to prosecute Bash. Lower-level FCC officials had evidence against him, and wanted to go after him with criminal charges - but the leadership said no. Those FCC folks who decided to let Bash get away with his "cheat sheets" almost 30 years ago were not young people then.

Actually, I have a ham license and haven't used a CB in over twenty years. I was merely servicing my sister-in-law's CB, and she's wondering how old the rig is.

Well, I looked around inside and noticed that the PLL chip has "78 31" stamped on it. This could mean the IC was manufactured late in 1978, which is consistent with an earlier posting suggesting the rig was manufactured in January 1983. On the other hand, there's nothing stamped or etched on the PC board or on anything else inside the rig.

Why, you've begun with a false premise. The League membership numbers

It's amusing that the only way he can do so is by putting down the most important task that most people will face in their lives: that of raising their families. This task is far more important than any military or career success that a person may have. The only thing that can equal it in importance are those who daily put their lives on the line to protect the public and our nation.

Indeed. Does anyone know?

Robesin has so many faces.

He is a War Hero, but was in no war.

Seven Hostile Actions, but can't mention ONE.

He is disabled from the military, but not injured.

He is a Tennesse State Guardsman, but not in the National Guard.

Presents himself in an Air Force sage green flight suit with Captain's Insignia, but claims he is a CAP Major.

He claims ANCOIC-ship of an NMC MARS site on Okinawa, but knows next to nothing of MARS.

He claims to be a Nurse, but no degree.

He puts forth word images of men eating his own excrement from another man's genitals, but says he is, somehow, not gay.

He says those who disagree with him are homos.

Those that best him in rational argument are called pedophiles.

Develops that 1,000 yard stare when confused, others suggest it's the "deer in headlights" stare.

> Who's "Robesin"...?!?!

Your guess is as good as mine.

I know of no "Church" of St. Hiram". I know of no amateur radio organization which pretends to be a religious organization. I know of no amateur radio organization which pretends to be part of the U.S. Government. I do know of a rather large amateur radio organization which does hold tightly monitored elections on a regular basis. No one with a potential conflict of interests is permitted to run.

Allow me to post another correction:

Len does not believe that Carl would have brought change to the ARRL.

> Membership in the ARRL is still a minority of all licensed

I believe you may be wrong on that, Len. I believe that about 1/3 of all U.S. radio amateurs belonged to the League some decades past. That was before all of the dumbing down began.

> ...yet the ARRL does its PR BS about "representing" ALL

It has done its best to do just that. Without the League, we'd have just a scattered few folks like you, wrapped in bunting and standing on soap boxes, each preaching to three or four people. There is strength in numbers.

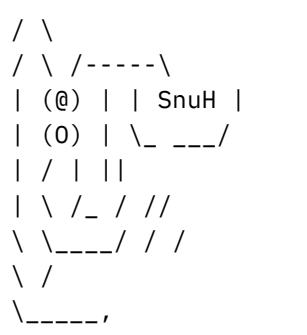
force you to reply against your will, Outer Filthï¿½.



You should be well represented at the year-end alt.flame awards, Spanky

Naw, I'll just move to a different Frequency, I'll park it right in the middle of the 20 meter band, I don't give a shit. When ham operators start complaining about it, I send your way.

I'm sure the FCC considered them. Here's how it probably went:

Assistant to FCC Section Chief: "Hey, boss, we just got some requests for LPTV waivers from some guy in Illinois named Todd Daugherty."

FCC Section Chief: "Todd...who? Oh, yeah...HIM again. Isn't he the guy who calls us all sorts of names on the Internet and brags about being a pirate?"

Assistant: "Let me get the file...yeah, that's him, all right. Real pain in the ass. What do you want to do about his requests?"

Chief: "File 'em. Right over there (points to big gray object in corner)."

Assistant: "But, Chief, that's the paper shredder...oh, I get it (snicker)!"

The point, Toad, is that "shall consider" does not mean "must grant."
As usual, you read into things what you want them to mean and then you get mad at the world when the world doesn't read them the same way you do.

And another, thing, Toad. When dealing with a Federal agency you have to explain yourself to them; they don't have to explain themselves to you. No, it isn't fair, but that's just the way it is. But that's your problem. You just can't accept that there are things you can't control.

Slow Code said:
> So when you die in a shootout with the infidel FCC, you get 72 virgins?

Does the Koran specify the gender of these virgins? Toad probably interprets the Koran the same way he interprets Part 15 - "it means what I say it means, not what it says."
